SEARCH MADE FOR RECORDER PROVES FUTILE

Mystery Surrounding County Officer's Disappearance Unsolved

AUDIT UNDER WAY

Examiners at Work Here To Make Special Report on Office Accounts

Mystery surrounding the disappearance of Charles E. Smith, county recorder, deepened this morning when another day passed without any word concerning his whereabouts.

As yet no definite clues have been unearthed concerning any reason for the disappearance of the official.

Examiners from the state bureau of inspection are now making a complete check of Smith's office records. The inspection is expected to be completed by Monday night. The examiners have orders to make a special report to the state auditor's office on the examination of Smith's records.

Examination of Smith's accounts is being made as a part of the regular inspection of records of county officials. The inspectors have been working at the courthouse for the past two months. The inspection is being made by T. W. Jones and A. G. Atwill.

Search Futile

A search conducted by E. A. Schultz, former city service director and friend of the missing man, and S. T. Smith, his father, has been fruitless, Schultz said this morning.

Smith disappeared Sunday, April 29. According to his parents he took a suitcase but had few articles of clothing. His car was left in the garage and it is supposed that he left the city by train some time after 2 o'clock Monday morning.

The grief-stricken parents were as much at loss this morning to account for the disappearance of their son as they were two weeks ago.

Miss Isabel Urquhart, 115 E. Walnut-st, a teacher in Gearwood school, fiancee of the missing man, had no suggestions to offer to explain the disappearance of Smith.

AUTOIST FINED $200, LOSES DRIVING RIGHT

One hundred dollars and costs on a charge of illegal possession of intoxicating liquor and $100 and costs and the suspension of his right to drive an automobile for one year on a charge of driving while intoxicated was the sentence drawn by G. L. Conwell, of Green Camp when he pleaded guilty to both charges before Municipal Judge William R. Martin this morning.

Conwell was arrested at W. Center-st and Parkadel shortly after 9 o'clock last night after he had narrowly escaped wrecking several others cars, according to police reports. Two pints of whisky were found in his possession when searched at police headquarters. He is being held at police headquarters pending the payment of a $25 fine assessed against him by Judge Martin when he pleaded guilty to the charge this morning.

True Story of Civil War Mother Whose Courage and Determination Rescued Her Son and His Comrades is Related by Marion Veteran

Troops Sent To Find Captured Soldiers After Mother Threatens To Go Alone

Account Is Given as Timely and Appropriate Prelude to Mother's Day

Editor's Note—This interesting narrative, related by one of Marion's best-known Civil War veterans from his personal experience in the great conflict for preservation of the Union, is published as a timely and appropriate Mother's Day feature.

BY COL. GEO. B. CHRISTIAN

An aftermath of the Civil War is the tenacity with which the old soldiers cling to their fighting organizations bearing the names that were made famous during the four years of that mighty struggle, the valleys of the rivers, the scenes of their many conflicts giving names ofttimes to these valiant armies.

In the west and southwest we had the Army of the Ohio, the Army of the Cumberland and the Army of the Tennessee. And while the Army of the Ohio seemed to be in the minds of many veterans a rather calm and restful territory as late as midsummer of 1863, this condition did not seem to exist in the mind of General Boyle, with headquarters at Louisville, Ky., commanding a portion of the area known as the Army of the Ohio. To him the dark and bloody ground known as Kentucky had lost none of its features as a fighting ground; but General Boyle was also disturbed, for had not the doughty Morgan with Basil Duke and a wonderful band of Kentucky horsemen crossed the Ohio almost under his eyes and with the dash and daring usual of the Morgan crowd rode gayly eastward, almost touching the outskirts of the Queen City, Cincinnati, moving on and on until the aroused troops of the Army of the Ohio closed in upon him, when, baffled by high water were unable to recross the river and make their escape. As a result General Morgan and his forces surrendered.

Following this we may recall that General Morgan and his staff officers were confined in the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus. The Army of the Ohio breathed somewhat easier for the time being. Shortly before this, mountain men had raided practically at will, many towns along the southern line of the Ohio river as far as Maysville, 65 miles from Cincinnati.

Rearranges Posts

General Boyle, rearranging his widelie posts in the far east, had sent the 10th Kentucky mounted Infantry to Mt. Sterling, and the 5th Battalion of O. V. C. to take their place and form the far eastern outpost for scouting and valuable duty in the mountain region of eastern Kentucky, a head-

Hoover Has 380 Delegates and Can Count on 80 Others, Is Belief

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
Star Staff Correspondent

Washington, May 12—One month from today, on June 12, the Republicans forgeather at Kansas City to nominate a candidate for the presidency.

Most of the 1089 delegates have been chosen. Only a handful of states are yet to select their representatives for the quadrennial drama. Many of the delegates have been instructed or committed, but a survey of the field today disclosed that at Kansas City, as elsewhere in other years, the uninstructed and "doubtful" delegates hold the whip hand.

A month before the curtain rises, Herbert Hoover is within striking distance of the nomination. He has by far the most committed delegates. The most reliable tabulation available in Washington gives him 380 as of today, and he probably can count upon 80 others from the friendly states, New Jersey, Texas, Alabama, Wyoming and Florida, which are still to act. But this leaves him still nearly 100 votes short of the 545 majority necessary to nominate.

Lowden Next in Line

Next in line is Frank O. Lowden of Illinois. The same table accords the grain belt candidate approximately 200 delegates. The balance of the field, made up of favorite sons and dark horses, is strung out far in the rear.

The big delegations from New York and Pennsylvania, controlling 130 votes between them hold the whip-hand in the situation at present, and little doubt was expressed here today that these leaders, practical politicians all, are going to Kansas City one month from today with their whip-hands intact.

Substantial confirmation of this is due in Philadelphia today when the 76 delegates from the Keystone State met for organization. W. L. Mellon, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Commit-

NEW FORD IN FIRST ACCIDENT IN COUNTY

Columbus Man Hits Culvert To Avoid Striking Woman

To O. M. Harmon of Columbus, traveling salesman for the Money-penny Hammond Co., goes the distinction of driving the first new model Ford figuring in an accident in Marion County.

Harmon's machine, a tudor sedan, was damaged when it struck a culvert on the Harding Highway, east of Caledonia, yesterday afternoon, and was towed to the Ford garage here for repairs. Harmon escaped injury, chiefly as a result of protection provided by the non-shatterable glass used in windshields of the new Fords.

One of the fenders was bent and the radius rod loosened.

A woman sitting on the culvert caused the accident, Harmon swerving his machine to one side to avoid striking her, he reported.

Worcester, Mass. Youth is Victor in Zone Contest of Oratorical Meet at Troy

Ohio Representative Meets His Superiors in Competition Which Forces Judges into Conference To Give Final Decision; Michigan and Vermont Representatives High

(Special to The Star)

Troy, N. Y., May 12—Charles J. Olson, Jr., 18 years old and six feet, one inch in height, of the Worcester, Mass., High School won the International Oratorical Contest national semi-finals in competition with nine other young men and women representatives of seven states in the northeast section of the United States.

Judges were unable to arrive at an unanimous decision. On their initial ballot each of three judges voted one first place to Olson, Miss Roberta F. Powers of Morrisville, Vermont, High School and Harry Elmmons Gross of Ottawa Hills High School, Grand Rapids, Mich. In the matter of low points totaled for each of the three contestants receiving a first-place award there was a wide divergence of opinion among the judges as the first position balloting indicated.

Superior to Others

There then remained but one thing for the judges to do under the rules governing the international contest, they had to go into conference and select the winner from among the students receiving a first place award and the low totals in point computation.

When this was done the judges made the award for Olson unanimous. The young Michigan student was awarded second place, which makes him alternate in the northeast United States zone.

WINTER WHEAT ABANDONMENT IN OHIO HEAVY

Government Crop Report for May 1 Shows Only 840,000 Acres Remaining

SEE 8,000,000 BUSHELS

Fruit Prospects Fairly Good; Pacture Growth Is Backward

Columbus, May 12—The May 1 government crop report issued today further substantiates the reports that the largest percentage of abandonment of winter wheat ever recorded in Ohio will take place this spring. The reports also forecast the smallest production of winter wheat, with one exception, in more than 91 years.

This report, as issued by C. S. Bay of the Federal Crop Reporting Service states that the growth of pastures and hay crops has also been very backward this spring.

Fruit prospects, it was said, are fairly good, very little frost damage having occurred.

Ohio farmers will market but 8[illegible] bushels of winter wheat, the report said. This forms a sharp contrast with the 28,000,000 bushels harvested last year.

840,000 Acres Remain

Approximately 2,471,000 acres of winter wheat was planted last fall. Of this huge acreage, but about 840,000 acres remain for harvest, the report declared.

Where winter wheat remains for harvest, the condition of the crop varies considerably, the report continued. There are some instances where the only reason for letting wheat fields stand is to save the clover which has been seeded in these fields.

The 38,000 acres of rye remaining for harvest in Ohio this season gave promise on May 1, of producing 410,000 bushels against 580,000 bushels last year.

Pasture Growth Slow

Growth of pastures this spring has been slow, it was stated, due to cool weather. Pasture had an average condition of 81 on May 1, as compared with 85 one year ago.

Supply of farm labor is reported somewhat in excess of the demand.

Stocks of hay on Ohio farms May 1 amounted to about 928,000 tons as

ARREST AKRON MAN HERE AS CHECK WORKER

H. V. Stephenson Accused of Defrauding Local Business Men

PURCHASES TIRES

Taken into Custody After Dealer Does Bit of Detective Work

Viewing with suspicion a check he had received from the purchase of an auto tire, Frank Wilhelm, E. Center-st tire dealer, turned detective yesterday afternoon with the result that H. V. Stephenson, alias Harry Hunter, alias Harry Smith of Akron, is being held at police headquarters for investigation while checks he is alleged to have passed on unsuspecting business men, continue to come in.

Early yesterday afternoon a well-dressed stranger entered the Wilhelm store on E. Center-st and after a few minutes conversation, during which he asked about the price of tires, left without making a purchase. An hour or so later he returned and after purchasing a tire offered in payment a check for $17.75 made payable to C. F. Miller and signed by Harry Smith.

The check was accepted by Wilhelm and the difference between the cost of the tire and the amount of the check was paid to the customer in cash. He left the tire behind, saying he would call for it later.

Follows Trail

His suspicions aroused, Wilhelm took up the trail of the stranger and after he had visited several other tire stores where he had carried out the same plan, Wilhelm called a patrolman and had him placed under arrest.

Several checks, all drawn on the First National Bank of Kenton and made payable to C. F. Smith and signed by Harry Smith, were found in his possession at police headquarters.

A check for $13.75 on the Kenton bank, made payable to W. J. Wallington and signed by Harry Smith, had been passed at the Mapes Tire Store on S. Main-st in payment for an automobile tire. A third check for $18.75 made payable to C. F. Miller and bearing the signature of Harry Smith was turned over to the police today by C. F. Lynch, who operates a tire store and filling station on N. Main-st. The check was given him by Stephenson yesterday in payment of a tire.

Police believe Stephenson to be the same person who floated a number of bad checks in this city several weeks ago. He became indignant, however, when accosted by the police yesterday, denying that he had been in the city at that time.

Marion Churches Arrange Services As Tribute To Mother

SPECIAL MUSIC AND SERMONS

Nearly All Local Congregations To Have Part in Observance

Nearly all Marion churches have special observances of Mother's Day, Sunday. Practically all pastors plan to give sermons appropriate to the occasion and in a number of churches special musical programs have been arranged. In addition to the church observance of Mother's Day is the service at which members of the World Wide Guild of the Marion Baptist Association honor their mothers at 4 o'clock this afternoon at Trinity Baptist church.

Mrs. Frank of Cincinnati, state president of World Wide Guild work, will give an address and a special program of Miss Helen Kinz, president of the Senior Guild, will be given by the girls.

Program Details

The service will open with an organ prelude, "Largo," Handel, played by Miss Mary Durfee and with a solo, "Mother's Song" to be sung by Miss Mabel Winters. Miss Mildred Bergstresser will give a poem, "A Song of Mother's Day" and Dr. U. S. Davis, pastor, will lead in prayer. Miss Winters will be heard in a second vocal number, Miss Emily Dale Wingett will play a piano solo. A candle service will follow with an organ postlude, "Grand Choeur," played by Miss Durfee, will close the program.

Members of the Senior League of Epworth M. E. Church will present a pageant story service, "His Mother's Sermon," at 10:30 a. m. at the church. Marion Chapter, Order of DeMolay, will attend in a body. Those taking part in the program are Misses Margaret Gladys Brobst, Evelyn Long and Dora Larson, assisted by the choir comprised of Mrs. Florence Shaw Rutherford, Mrs. Leila Wayne Wolcott and W. E. Orcutt.

Central Christian Service

At Central Christian Church, at the conclusion of the Christian Endeavor Society will present a pageant, "A Mother and Her Daughter," while the Bible School session a Mother's Day program will be given by the pastor, Rev. George E. Groves, pastor, who will speak at the morning service on the subject, "Mother's Day."

A musical program entitled, "A Mother's Crown," will be presented by the young people's department at the church of Brethren at a service Sunday evening at 7:30.

Services honoring mothers will be conducted at Calvary Evangelical church, Sunday School at 9 o'clock and morning worship at 10:30. At the Sunday School session Mrs. John Ruth will give a "Tribute to Mothers" and Mrs. Mark Ostrette, Sunday School superintendent, W. L. Johnson and Mrs. C. E. "Come Unto Me"

A SERMONETTE
BY REV. W. H. HOWARD
Pastor, First United Brethren Church

"Come unto me all ye that labor, and I will give you rest."
—Matth. 11th and 28th Verse

THE moral needs of men and the method of help are always the same. Forgiveness does not always remove the evil consequences of sin. The reformed drunkard can not be what he was simply because he was forgiven.

We properly favor the man who has always been trusty, rather than the profligate.

Repentance and forgiveness remove a large share of evil consequences.

Through repentance, evil habits are stopped that would grow continually worse. The penitent secures peace. He also avoids eternal death. He hastens toward the home where suffering ceases.

The Israelites looking upon the brazen serpent, accepted the invitation of the text. Who are to come? Sinners. Why? Because the service of sin is the most grievous labor, and an evil conscience is the heaviest burden. Self-destruction comes from a guilty conscience.

John 5 and 3: "For this is the love of God that we keep His commandments, and His commandments are not grievous." This also, gives us rest from all the wicked toils of life. John 16 and 7 says: "Nevertheless I tell you a truth, it is expedient for you that I go away for if I go not away the Comforter will not come to you but if I depart I will send him unto you."

Men may influence us to come to Christ but we should come voluntarily. We should come ourselves, and lay our burdens upon the cross and then like the children of Israel it needs only a look.

Now the invitation to Christ is personal. There is not one that needs be slighted. A grand feast has been prepared for all. We sometimes feel that we are slighted. We feel that we are as worthy as those who have been accorded an invitation and a feeling of dissatisfaction lingers.

I want to invite you personally to a feast where all are welcome. This feast will not exhaust, but it will enliven. Come to the feast where we may obtain rest. Jesus is inviting you to come.

SURVEY PLANNED IN ALL OHIO COUNTIES

Adjustment of Tax Values on Farms Sought by Realtors' Group

Columbus, May 12—A comparison of sale prices and the assessed valuation of farm land will be made in every county of the state, according to action taken at a statewide conference of the Farmland Division of the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards held in Columbus, May 9.

It was pointed out at the meeting that there has been such a decline in the prices received for farm lands that in many cases farms are sold for a price much less than the assessed valuation. A resolution reading as follows was passed:

Whereas, it is apparent that farm values have declined and that they are a great deal less than when last appraised and

Whereas, we believe that the present valuation for taxation is too high.

Therefore, be it resolved by the Farmland Division of the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards in session assembled, that said Farmland Division procure a sales record of actual farm sales in every county in the state of Ohio and compare same with the assessed valuation of those farms.

Be it further resolved that this body co-operate with State Secretary Ray Hofford, and H. R. Moore of the Department of Rural Economics of Ohio State University in the collection and tabulation of such information and that such findings be given to the proper authorities in an attempt to secure a fair readjustment of taxation on farm lands."

The meeting was presided over by Chas. C. Marquardt, Tiffin, president of the Farmland Division. J. W. Jacoby, Marion, was one of the speakers.

TAX REDUCTION

Ohio Theater Goers Pay Less in Admission Fees, Reports Show

Washington, May 12—Ohioans paid $481,752 in federal taxes on admissions to theaters and other places of amusement during the nine months ended March 31 last, as compared with $545,245 during the corresponding period which ended last year. However, there was a slight increase from $406,187 to $417,112 in the amount collected in Ohio from the federal tax on club dues. The substantial drop in collections from theater admissions is due to the provision in the revenue act of 1926 whereby all admissions of 75 cents or less were made exempt from the tax.

VICTORY SIGHTED IN FIGHT ON AUTO TAX

Motor Clubs To Win Out in Effort To Kill Excise Levy, Is Belief

Unceasing efforts of the American Automobile Association and its more than 1,000 affiliated clubs since the World War, seeking the repeal of the automobile three per cent excise tax, seem to be nearing the point of ultimate reward, reports received by the Marion Auto Club state. This is indicated in the recent action of the senate finance committee which voted unanimously for the repeal of this tax and which is expected to recommend to the senate as a whole that the tax be eliminated.

"This will not only be a signal victory for organized motorists, but it will mean the winning of the most important fight that has ever been waged in the interest of automobile owners," according to A. E. Mittendorf, president of the Ohio State Automobile association. "It will also mean the saving of approximately $60,000,000 annually to motorists that could only have been brought about by a persistent campaign such as has been waged for almost seven years," Mittendorf said.

During the calendar year 1927, the automobile tales tax brought $90,435,000 into the federal treasury through the three per cent tax. During 1926 it yielded $88,920,000 because the cut from five per cent to three per cent did not become effective until late in the spring. Since it was imposed as a war measure, the automobile tax has paid $1,100,000,000 into the treasury.

A man who does his work best is the one who does it his own way. Be satisfied and say nothing.

SIGNS OF BUILDING ACTIVITY DEVELOP

Reports Compare with Early Stages of 1927 Boom Period

Washington, May 12—Construction operations have swung into the stretch of increased activity which they will follow throughout the summer, according to statistics just compiled by the Associated General Contractors of America. The volume of construction registered for April showed a strong increase over the March total. This increase is virtually identical with the rise which took place during the corresponding period one year ago when midsummer operations that later were to shatter records were started.

The volume of work handled by the construction industry during the first four months of this year is equal to the figure registered during the corresponding period of 1927.

These statistics, it is stated, are based upon actual shipments of basic construction materials and include all types of construction work.

A scale which places the 1913 average at 100 as its basis, shows the index number for the April volume of construction to be 164, increase of 27 points over the March figure.

A close similarity exists between the trend of operations since January of this year and the comparative figures for the corresponding period one year ago. Index numbers for the first four months of this year are: January, 125; February, 124; March, 137, and April, 164. The corresponding figures for 1927 are: January, 129; February, 121; March, 135, and April, 166.

Awards of contracts reached a high total during March, indicating that actual operations during months of the immediate future will hold close to the lively pace maintained during the midsummer period of last year.

HOME SALES LISTED IN OAKLAND HEIGHTS

Evidence of activity in Oakland Heights realty transactions was furnished today in the announcement of two home sales.

E. Muson, it was announced, has sold his residence on Lincolnway and purchased a new home on Sheridan-rd in the Oakland Heights addition.

BUNGALOWS OF HIGH STANDARD

W. T. Jones Constructing Homes Provided with All Conveniences

Many of our present day homes are built without regard to architecture or attractiveness. They are built hurriedly with little thought but to get the required number of rooms with bath, for a certain limited amount of money.

It is seldom that a builder of reasonably priced homes gives time or thought to making homes home-like for his prospective tenants, but not so with W. T. Jones.

Mr. Jones is now building two exceptionally fine Spanish bungalows on Sheridan-rd in Oakland Heights. These two beautiful little homes are the first of the Spanish type to be built on Maynard-dr and Sheridan-rd. It is Mr. Jones' plan to make Maynard-dr a completely bungalow street all the way through to Jonesboro-rd.

These first two homes are strictly high-class and modern. They are of hollow tile construction which makes them resist cold, heat and excessive moisture and at the same time they will be practically fireproof. The outer surfaces are to be of three-coat stucco put on by some of the finest stucco experts in this part of the country. The roofs are covered with Johns-Manville asbestos roofing, which is well known for its beauty and wearing qualities. Each house is to have five rooms and bath with a full basement underneath. The bathrooms will have tile floors and built-in bathtubs. The living rooms will have mantels and tile hearth and the floors will be of fine hardwood.

These new homes have access to all the city conveniences, which include gas, sewers, sidewalks, lights, telephone and hard-surfaced streets. They will be finished and completely furnished by June 1, at which time they will be open to the public.

Landscaping Plan

In addition to details described above, Mr. Jones plans to put in shrubs and trees and attractively landscape these properties to blend with the brown stucco and cream trim of the one bungalow and the white stucco with the apple green trim of the other.

Mr. Jones is particularly fortunate in having O. A. Owens as his contractor and cement expert. Mr. Owens is a man of 14 years experience in the cement and stucco business and is thoroughly familiar with it in all its phases. He spent some seven years with the New York Power Co. of Pittsburgh. Later Mr. Owens was with the H. G. Christman, Inc., of Detroit, a firm which just completed the new National Parking Garage in Columbus.

At your first opportunity drive out and see these two pretty little homes. You will find it well worth your trouble.

Speed Makes Or Breaks Athletes In All Lines Of Sport

BY FRANK G. MENKE

S[illegible] man isn't possessed of [illegible] chance of achiev[illegible]tion as an athlete. [illegible]of it, there is no [illegible] heights of fame and [illegible] attain.

[illegible]peed is the thing. A [illegible] may have everything [illegible] heart, accuracy, stub[illegible]ty, fighting spirit but [illegible] in speed he is done [illegible] starts.

"Unless a boy has speed his chances of becoming a good football player are remote," declares Bill Roper, the gridiron tutor of Princeton. "The greater his speed the greater his value, whether he's in the backfield or on the lines. Give me a lad of great speed for line duty, who may lack a little brawn, and I'd prefer him to the strongest of strong men if the latter was slow of foot."

Speed!

It made Ty Cobb a star 22 years ago—kept him a star when all others of his time had dimmed. It was speed that made Tris Speaker the greatest of outfielders and Eddie Collins one of the most brilliant of infielders.

Some there are who will point to Babe Ruth and say:

"There's a guy that got somewhere without speed.

But so much is not fact. A big bodied man is Ruth with legs like a crane, seemingly top heavy and awkward and slow. Yet Ruth is amazingly fast afoot for a big man and huge though he is he can still outstrip many men 50 pounds lighter.

It is speed that wins in swimming—speed that wins on the athletic tracks. The argument, perhaps, will be offered that in distance swims and distance runs durability is the real test. But after all, it's speed that counts.

A man may have enough stored up energy to swim 25 miles—or run as far. But if there's another man in the race with the same durability—and speed in addition—well, who'll win?

In boxing speed is the deciding factor.

Gene Tunney had more than Jack Dempsey in Philadelphia—and Tunney whipped an "unbeatable champion." In Chicago Dempsey stepped right along with Tunney for seven rounds.

Then Dempsey's legs faltered; his arms grew weary. Speed was gone from his legs—and his arms. Tunney retained his. And Tunney, outstepping Dempsey the rest of the way, beating him to the punch, setting a pace that Dempsey couldn't follow, won the brawl.

Even in wrestling it's the speed a man can get into his maneuvers—the quickness with which he grabs and whirls and tosses that generally decides the issue.

Speed decides in soccer, lacrosse, rowing, in yachting, polo, horse racing—just about everything that men try in the form of athletic endeavor.

There is one exception. It's golf. Victory there is not always for the swift but who shall deny that the element of speed, with its rhythmic, powerful, complete action, does not cut a few capers?

Speed belongs to youth.

Put a youngster against a middle aged man and a veteran in a game of golf—and invariably the youngster wins. Why? Some will say that the youngster has greater power. But power isn't vital in golf. Nerve control is supposed to be the big thing.

As among three such men, nerve control would be expected to operate amongst first the youngster or the oldtimer. For old age is inclined to have quivering nerves; youth impetuous, impulsive nerves.

Therefore, the fact that youth does conquer all others in golf, as a general thing would indicate that even here in this speed less game, speed is the something that generally decides the outcome.

CLEVELAND ABLE TO WIN ONLY ONE GAME FROM LEADING YANKS

Mackmen Continue To Pile Up Wins by Defeating Browns

New York, May 12—Philadelphia today appears to be the only team capable of stopping the New York Yankees from batting their way to another American League pennant, Cleveland, the west's strongest representative, could take only one of three games from the world's champions.

Timely home runs by Babe Ruth and Buster Gehrig, New York's mighty sluggers, ruined the Indians on successive days. Yesterday Gehrig smacked his fourth circuit clout of the season with the bases full. And the Yanks finally conquered George Uhle, their pet nemesis, who was rushed to the mound from the bull pen in the ninth. Paschal's unexpected knot in the ninth with two out tied the score and Meusel's double won the game in the tenth, 7 to 6.

Win Thirteenth

Those amazing Athletics have copped 13 of their last 14 starts yesterday they knowed Sam Gray. Former Nuckman who has been a perfect worse as a St. Louis pitcher, grid luck an 11 to 5 slugfest from the Browns. It was Shea's sixth straight victory.

In the National League, the St Louis Cardinals have won two straight. Alexander the great fanned five men as the Cards nosed out the Phillies yesterday, 3 to 2.

The Red Birds have been greatly strengthened by two trades made with in as many days. They got George Harper slugging New York outfielder, and Jimmy Wilson, crack Philadelphia catcher, in exchange for the injured Pat O'Farrell and a flock of minor leaguers.

Cubs May Surprise Giants

With pitchers Jones, Root, Carlson and Nehf in good shape, the Cubs are likely to surprise the league leading New York Giants in the series starting today. Yesterday Nehf, the world series hero of other years who failed to make good with the Reds last season, told Brooklyn to five cuts and won a 2 to 0 duel from the great Dazzy Vance, Hack Wilson walloped his fourth homer.

Southpaw Lucas, the redhead of the Reds, blanked the Boston Braves by a 3 to 0 score. Washington finally trounced Detroit, 9 to 5, and the Red Sox regained seventh place from the White Sox when Todt's homer put Chicago on the short end of a 4 to 3 count.

The Giants and the Pirates did not play.

Burggraf, the starting pitcher for Iberia, struck out three men and allowed no hits in two innings. He was relieved by Curtis at the beginning of the third inning. Curtis struck out ten men and allowed hits for the remainder of the game.

The score by innings:

LOU GEHRIG GETS IN HOME RUN BATTLE

Crown Prince of Swat Smashes Out Homer with Bases Full

New York, May 12—Buster Gehrig, the crown prince of swat, has set sail after Babe Ruth and Joe Hauser in the American League home run race. Gehrig's fourth homer of the season, made against Joe Shaute of Cleveland yesterday with the bases full, leaves him two behind Hauser and three behind Ruth.

Hack Wilson of the Cubs also hit his fourth homer of the season, placing him within two of Del Bissonette, leader in the National League home run sweepstakes.

36 CARS ENTERED IN INDIANAPOLIS EVENT

Holder of Speedway Record Will Drive Car This Year

Indianapolis, Ind., May 12—Thirty-six cars, the choice array of speed creations of the world, have been entered in the Sixteenth International 500 mile race to be held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

Two of the mounts are of French design, one to be driven by a Roumanian nobleman, Prince Ghica, the other by an American pilot, D. K. "Shorty" Caulton.

The entries closed May 1, and a Marmon Special, entered by the Cooper Engineering Company was the last car to be included in the lists. It was handed to T. E. "Pop" Myers, general manager of the Indianapolis track, by Earl Cooper, captain of the Marmon team, just 60 seconds before it was too late, to satisfy the superstitious whim of the mechanics who are preparing the car for the contest. There is a racing tradition that the last car entered in the race will be the first one home at the end of the event. "I'm not superstitious," smiled Cooper in handing in the belated entry, "but if it will make the mechanics any happier I'm for it." Post entries never have been received for the Indianapolis race.

Two previous winners, Peter De Paolo, nephew of Ralph DePalma, who established the track record of 101.13 miles an hour for the 500 miles in 1925, and George Souders, Purdue University undergraduate who won last year will drive. Tommy Milton, only two-time winner of an International 500 mile race, is preparing a mount for Cliff Durant, multimillionaire sportsman who has a penchant for driving fast automobiles.

Norman Batten, who bravely drove his flaming car down the home stretch in last year's race, and Henry Kohlert, St. Charles, Ill., garage owner who was severely injured in last year's event are both entered in the contest.

Derby Leader is Forced To Quit Near Fremont

Fremont, May 12—The "Bunion derby" streamed out of here for Elyria today with Andrew Payne, the Chickasaw, Okla., boy, once more at the head of the pack.

The youthful Oklahoman was in that position by virtue of the ill fortune which finally overtook Peter Gavuzzi, the Southampton, England, runner, and forced him out of the race.

Gavuzzi, who headed the field through Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and half of Ohio, was found late yesterday in a ditch 35 miles west of here, calmly smoking a cigaret. He had dropped from sheer exhaustion.

"My teeth!" explained the game little runner. "They have been troubling me for two weeks. They finally got me. I haven't been able to eat anything but soup for two weeks. With malnutrition sapping my strength there was nothing to do but quit."

Queried as to his future plans, Gavuzzi smiled and said:

"I guess I go on the program selling crew now."

John Salo, Passaic, N. J., Finnish American, was first in the transcontinental grind to reach here over the 61 mile course from Wauseon. It was the sixty-ninth control. Salo's time was 5:58:43. Formerly in third place, Salo is now runnerup to Payne.

Speculative Borrowings Increase 80 Million To Set Record

ORDER MARKET CLOSED TODAY

Six Per Cent Call Loan Rate Fails To Stop Price Rise

BY W. S. COUSINS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

New York, May 12.—A six percent call loan rate did not impose an effective barrier to the rise in prices of the railroad, motor and specialty stocks on the New York Stock Exchange this week. The New York Reserve Bank took no action on the rediscount rate, and brokers loans achieved an extremely high increase of about $80,000,000, making a new peak in speculative borrowings for all time.

In order to ease the pressure on the mercantile facilities of the exchange and the commission houses the governors ordered that the big market close today, and the example was followed by the curb and some of the out of town exchanges.

To Concentrate Buying

The effect of this closing was to concentrate considerable odd-lot buying on Thursday and Friday.

General Motors Corporation fulfilled expectations by declaring an extra $2 cash dividend, in addition to the $1.25 regular quarterly dividend on their common stock. If this rate can be maintained it will mean an annual price movement to stockholders of $13 a share, amply justifying the current price of the stock.

The motor car business as a whole was shown up in a favorable light, and stocks of the well known motors continued to move forward under the stimulus of strengthy professional and outside buying.

Tonnage Drops

The Steel Corporation's tonnage report showed a decrease of 403,000 tons in advance orders during April, but the steel trade authorities attributed this to the increase of prompt delivery orders over deferred delivery. They showed that production was keeping up with the fast pace earlier in the year, and consumption in large volume.

The same was true of the copper trade, and various sections of the metal industrials. United States Steel again sold at 150 for a gain of about six points from the low of the week, with short covering an important factor in the forward movement in the week end. Independent steels were uncommonly active and strong, with Bethlehem, Ludlum and Youngstown in the lead. American Smelting led the advance in the coppers, with Chili, Anaconda and Kennecott following closely.

BANK CLEARINGS REACH HIGH TOTAL

A marked increase in bank clearings yesterday over the total of a week ago, was shown in figures given out at the Marion County Bank this morning. Yesterday's clearings according were $139,281.27 while on last Friday the clearings were $89,076.81.

EDGAR FISKE ALLEN ON LOCAL PROGRAM

Leaden of Crippled Chilrden's Movement To Address Rotary Club

Governors will have as their speaker at their regular luncheon at Hotel Harding Monday noon, Edgar Fiske Allen, of Elyria, founder of the Ohio Society for Crippled Children and president of the International Society for Crippled Children, it was announced by the committee today.

Belief that only through co-operation could the greatest good be accomplished for the crippled child, "Doddy" Allen, as he is known to Rotarians, at an anniversary banquet of the Elyria Rotary Club held in that city on April 15, 1919, laid the cornerstone for the present organization by a plea for the crippled child. Other clubs throughout the state took up the work and on May 8 1919 the Ohio Society for Crippled Children was born.

As a result of this organization, more than 1,900 crippled children have received physical care and treatment under the supervision of the State Welfare Department, more than 10,000 crippled children have been examined by expert orthopedic surgeons at clinics conducted in various parts of the state and probably 2,000 crippled children have had the advantage of special educational facilities.

The local school for crippled children, which now has a membership of 17, was due partly to the efforts of this organization and partly to the efforts of the local Rotary Club. Much credit for the success of the local school and for the work that has already been done among the crippled children of the city, is given to James Cooper, chairman of the crippled children committee of the local club.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S MARKET

Chicago, May 12—After selling out early the grains came back and closed generally higher yesterday, but the gains in wheat and corn were small. Neither of these looked particularly promising on the bull side of the end, but Saturday is often a startling day—usually an erratic one, according to the Herald and Examiner.

At the finish wheat was 3/8c to 1 better; corn was 1/4c higher; oats were up 3/8c to 1c; rye was up 1¼ to 1½c.

Private messages from various parts of the Winter wheat belt were pouring in to various operators of prominence. John Marrett received one that read as follows:

"Don't be misled, John. Oklahoma's estimate by reliable people is 40,000,000 bushels."

Production in Oklahoma

Last year Oklahoma harvested less than 34,000,000 bu; in 1926 over 71,000,000; in 1925, about 27,000,000, in 1924 about 59,000,000

If you can make out from that what 40,000,000 bu will mean in the market sense, you can do more than most persons with statistics on wheat production.

Thomas Howell was credited with being a big seller at intervals during the day. The sharp drop during the last few minutes of the session was supposed by many to have been too fast to let outside buyers get out. They presumed, therefore, that the market might decline on belated selling at the outset this morning.

If wheat is strong and goes up today it may be a dangerous market to follow on the buying side. The big ups and downs of late have been too severe, probably to allow the market to get back to regular trading yet.

Quick Shifts Likely

Quick, but important, shifts in prices may chase the pit for some days to come. It will be a good time to curb optimism and to hold pessimism in check. Unbiased observation is often a great clarifier for the brain befogged with a language of either bullish or bearish sentiment.

News concerning the Spring crop is likely to be the biggest market influence from now until the next government report. As usual the Spring wheat area in our Northwest and in Canada will furnish all kinds of weather and all kinds of news. If you are patient you will get what you want, but it may chance again overnight.

Corn was very weak early in yesterday's session. On a break that carried the July future down to 106 1-4, the September down to 108 1-2 and the May down to 103, there was heavy covering.

Corn Rallies Late

Prices rallied and came back nobly but under the circumstances there was nothing in this upturn that seemed to indicate a reversal of the recent trend in prices. On further advances corn may again meet with selling, but a break at the opening today may not be the spot to press it.

For the last few days bulls in corn looked as if they were putting up a losing fight. They may have a hard time to get the country enthusiastic on the long side again until after the market is thoroughly cleaned out. The cleaning process might mean a considerable further decline.

The situation in oats appears to be very tight. The condition in that market suggests strength in corn, an analogy which by no means follows.

Rye is strong with no great buying, apparently, of cash grain in the futures market.

In the cash market wheat was steady, corn was unchanged to 2c lower, oats were unchanged to 1c up, rye was quiet, barley was steady.

SCHWAB PREDICTS GOOD U. S. BUSINESS

Steel Magnate Optimistic Regardless of Presidential Race

New York, May 12—Regardless of the outcome of the national presidential election this year, Charles F. Schwab, the steel magnate, believes that business in the United States will continue to be good, he asserted today on his arrival on the liner Berengaria from a brief trip to England where he was awarded the Bessemer medal by the British Iron and Steel Institute.

Schwab said the steel business in this country continues good and he is still optimistic.

"Wages continue high," he declared, "and so long as labor is financially satisfied conditions in America will remain prosperous. I do not believe national elections any longer have any effect on business here and, regardless of the outcome this year, our industrial and economic progress should not be impaired."

Lay Plans in Kenton For Annual Coonhound Trails

KENTON, May 12—Hundreds of coonhounds from every section of the country will compete here this year in the second annual National Leafy Oak field trials for the coveted title of national field trial champion, the $1,000 Leafy Oak stake and large silver loving cup.

The event, inaugurated last season by Henry J. Pfeiffer and Holmes B. Lingo, sportsmen and promoters, for the sole purpose of elevating the lowly coonhound to the bluebblooded class in dogdom and of starting a pedigreed strain, will start Labor Day, September 3.

Entry list was opened during the past week and before the closing day, July 10, more than 1000 dogs will have been entered, promoters believe. Last season the field was limited to 200 dogs, brought here from 13 different states.

Among the favored contenders this year will be "Little Sheik," owned by L. B. Baker, Norwich Ohio, who last season carried off championship honors. He will again seek to annex the national championship for 1928.

In addition to the $1,000 stake to be split 60, 30 and 10 between the entries in the grand final, each elimination heat will be contested for a purse of $50 of which $25 goes to the dog proving himself winner at the tree and the remainder to the first hound carrying the trail across the specified line.

Judges for the trials, three of them together with two alternates, are to be named by three of the country's leading sporting publications. With the possible exception of a few minor revisions, the same ground rules which were in force during the 1927 meet will again be effective in 1928. A number of radical changes have been made in the primary routine.

Already promoters are being deluged by mail from every state in the Union seeking information and details on the coming trials.

The body was found in the basement by the husband, Pearl G., New York Central Railroad yardmaster, when he returned home from work late in the afternoon.

Dr. R. G. Schutte, Hardin County coroner, gave a verdict of "suicide by shooting."

She was born in Hardin County, June 29, 1884, and had lived her entire life here. She was active, until ill health prevented, in the work of the Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church.

WORKING PHILOSOPHY FOR BOYS IS SOUGHT

National Conference of Y. M. C. A. Opens in Chicago; Consider Many Questions

Chicago, May 12—Development of a working philosophy for nearly a half million boys throughout the United States was the task of the national conference on boys' work of the Y. M. C. A., which opened for a three-day session here today.

Questions to be considered by representatives from 60 sections of the country included:

In what way can the "gang" tendency of boys be utilized to direct them into constructive channels?

Does the social instinct generally lead, in youth, to mischief or to juvenile delinquency?

How can the condition of working boys be bettered?

High school youths, whose membership in clubs of the Y. M. C. A., numbers more than 100,000 in the United States, furnished one of the chief problems. Delegates were to attempt to formulate a system utilizing the natural tendencies of youth, for its own direction.

HERRON FACES LIFE TERM IN OHIO PEN

Second Degree Murder Verdict Returned Against New Philadelphia Man

New Philadelphia, May 12—William Herron, alleged murderer of his sister-in-law, Miss Viola May, 23, on a lonely automobile ride on the night of Feb. 7, today faced life imprisonment following a verdict of a Common Pleas Court jury last night finding him guilty of murder in the second degree. He will be sentenced by Common Pleas Judge Eli E. Lindsay either today or early next week.

The jury returned the second degree murder verdict after deliberating five hours. The 12 men and women retired at 4:45 and returned at 10:20 o'clock last night. Herron heard the verdict with calmness and without visible signs of emotion.

No appeal will be taken, it was indicated by Henry Bowers, senior defense counsel for Herron. The second degree murder verdict carries with it a sentence of life imprisonment.

Tells of Ride

Herron was alleged to have slain Miss May during the course of an argument over his attentions to her on a lonely automobile ride on the night of Feb. 7. Herron, earlier in the evening, started to take Miss May and her chum, Miss Evelyn Fretz, home after they visited with his wife. He and Miss May went riding after taking Miss Fretz home.

The state alleged that Herron choked Miss May to death after she resisted his advances. Herron claimed that he had been intimate with her and that during a quarrel in which she threatened to tell his wife, he pushed her from him and she slumped into the seat of his automobile, dead. He threw her body into the river, he testified, after becoming frantic with fear. Her body was found seven weeks later.

An autopsy by Coroner J. F. Lewis upon the body of the girl was said to have corroborated Herron's statement that the girl did not die of suffocation.

FROM the time chicks step out of their shells, they look to you for protection and care to live and thrive. Poultry yard facts show that more than 90% of the chicks fed Purina Startena and Purina Baby Chick Chow live and grow rapidly into plump broilers and early laying pullets. PREPARE FOR CAMP

JUST a few more weeks remains before schools close and Boy Scouts of Marion and the Harding Area are marking time preliminary to the formal opening of Camp John A. Owens, south of here, on June 18.

Four camping periods in which 21 troops of the area will take part have been mapped out by Director W. C. Brown, who, with a picked staff of assistants, will have charge of the Scouts this year.

Under the direction of Brown, the camp bulletin has been prepared and within the next two weeks will be in the hands of every Scout in the district.

Each period will run for two weeks with the camp closing for the season on August 11. QUARTERS CHANGED

Headquarters of the Harding Area and Boy Scouts of Marion has been changed with the new offices being taken over today by Scout Executive W. C. Brown.

DEBATE TONIGHT

Six members of Troop No. 9 of Marion will match words tonight in a debate over the apparently gigantic problem of whether the soldier or the farmer was the most useful during the World War.

At the last meeting of the troop the Raccoon Patrol held a penny social. Ivan O'Brien and Albert Smith, members of the Bear Patrol, hiked six miles west of Marion and returned during the week. Robert Richards, Thrush and Gregg Wilhelm completed their tests in pioneering and bridge building.

Tests were passed by A. S. M. Thomas Mondatt, Clyde Tennis of Colby and Pete George.

TENT MOBILIZATION

Troop No. 5 of Marion will hold a tent mobilization at Indian Mound Monday night. At the last meeting of the troops, plans for the event were arranged.

PLAN CAMPING TRIP

A three-day camping trip has been planned by Troop No. 8 at Morral under the direction of Scoutmaster Arthur Porter.

ANNUAL BANQUET

The annual banquet and patrol entertainment of Troop No. 7 of Prospect will be held on June 2 at the village hall. The last meeting was attended by Executive Brown, when arrangements for the event were made.

PATROLS ORGANIZED

Troop No. 14 at LaRue is stepping in action, having organized into patrols. A charter has been applied for.

HIKE ON PROGRAM

An outdoor hike is planned for Troop No. 6 of Marion for next week. Troop No. 3 of Epworth Church spent its last meeting with the tenderfoot Scouts passing tests.

KID CAMPAIGN LITERATURE
THE PEEPUL

WELL, all I know is just what I read in the papers. Been messing around the country a good deal lately, trying to find something to talk to you all about. All the Politicians are trying to stir up some excitement in their line of work, but I can't find much interest in their graft outside the ones that are in it. The outside people have just about come to the conclusion that there ain't a worry's worth of difference in either one and they just tire to forget it, and lave it down if they ever did take any interest.

By the way, the way they are handling the Treasury now there don't look like it will do anybody any good to get in. What's the use of running your head off to get to a table where the food has just been all eaten up? If I was an office seeker, I would kinder be doubtful whether there was enough in there left just to pay my regular salary, much less that what I wanted to run for office for.

Know Your Congressman

They sure are taking the old Treasury to a cleaning. None of this million, or five million dollar appropriation. It's a half billion or nothing in a Bill nowadays. It takes a man that can think in big numbers to introduce a bill in Congress nowadays. A Bill under a hundred million would be so unusual that it wouldent pass. "We can't spend our time voting on trifles." He would be laughted out of Congress as a Small Timer.

If you get a river near your home and the Government haven't dredged it up yet, why it's because you haven't sent them a blue print of where it is, and havent asked them to put one in for you. If you get some land that nothing will grow on and haven't had it irrigated, why its because you dont know your Congressman. Everybody wants land irrigated by the Government. For, as anyone knows, new land with plenty of water will raise quite a lot. But so will old land if it was fertilized, so why should the whole of American Taxpayers pay for water for newly irrigated land any more than they would for fertilizer for old land? Both will do the same thing if you will put them on there. But it looks like nobody is ever original enough to think of a Pull like that. They don't think that water is the only thing that will help land. Why my Lord there is dozens of different things that will help the farmer on his land, water, or fertilization either. There is the Interest on the first and second Mortgage. Why don't they introduce a Bill in Congress for Congress to help the Farmer by paying off his Mortgages. That's what's eating him up on the farm, its not lack of irrigation or lack of fertilization, its ARREARAGE of Interest. That's the Relief that is there very minute of every day. Not when it's needed or when you see it, but every minute of every day and night. This old song about "Old Man River." Its old man Interest that keeps the old Farmer running to town every few days. He has to have a bookkeeper to keep a set of books to keep track of when his various Notes and Mortgages before it comes due. It's the thought of the old Mortgages that keep him awake at night.

But if you notice they are always trying to put through some kind of Pull in Congress, but nobody ever puts it through one to do something about Interest. No sir, you couldent do that, then you are getting into the business of the Boss that really hold the hoop while the pumping is going on. You can't get more out a Bill through Congress that the old interest down than you could to get a politician to admit a mistake.

Nicking Good

They limit a Saving Bank from paying you over four or five percent, but about eight is legal if you are the one to do the borrowing, and then nothing commits has ever been done about the "Bonus" that the extra for the loan. But I will say there is some that are honest enough they don't do that. I wont call names, but they will be given on application.

So you see everybody has their racket, and everybody is looking to pick the old Treasury out of something and on account of this being a Presidential year that makes the picking more juicy.

But Let's get off of souse and get back to foolishness. It looks like Hoover and Smith are about the only two the people want from what I can gather. So I doubt if either one will be nominated. Well, I guess Smith will, for his position is exactly reversed from Hoover's. Smith the Democratic Politicians want him, worse than the entire people while with Hoover it's the people that want him, not the Politicians in his party. So it may be Smith against Dawes, and that would make a colorful campaign. Dawes would make that sawy-back

"One reason for the lack of full development to college life is caused by the friction between sorority and non-sorority groups. Cleavage to a group which is not congenial is a great obstacle in the path of adjustment," Dean Gaw believes.

Careful steps are being taken, according to the Ohio State dean, in eliminating the causes for the maladjustment of the freshmen co-ed. If girls are compelled to work during the college career, they are encouraged to shorten their daily schedules of work to give more time for recreation. To curb the emotional fault, students are now being taught how to study at the beginning of the freshmen year.

LITTLE INTEREST IN WORKHOUSE PROJECT

Grand Jury Recommendation Not Considered by Commissioners

Prospect of any immediate action on the recommendation of the grand jury that Marion County build a workhouse to take care of its prisoners sentenced to jail, appeared slight today.

County commissioners, under whose authority a move for the workhouse must be taken, stated that they have not discussed the matter. The floating of a bond issue would be necessary to finance the project, the commissioners point out. Since the voters of the county flatly turned down a bond issue of $80,000 for repairing the courthouse, at the general election last fall, it is considered doubtful if they would approve an expenditure of approximately $250,000 for a workhouse.

Prosecutor's View

Prosecuting Attorney Frank Wiedemann, however, was of the opinion that previous plans considered for a workhouse had been to elaborate and that a building for the institution need not cost a large sum. His suggestion is a building to house 30 or 40 persons, the prisoners to be used in operating the county home farm.

The question of a workhouse for Marion County was revived Tuesday when the grand jury recommended the construction of a building for that purpose, in its report to the Common Pleas Court.

POPE SETS ASIDE DAY OF REPARATION

Asks Prayers on Friday Following Feast of Corpus Christi

Rome, May 12—Pope Pius XI issued an encyclical addressed to Catholic churches throughout the world ordering a special prayer to be said deploring certain sins, but notably "those by governments which are plotting against God's Church even unless where offense human rights are to blame, where churches destroyed, priests and nuns driven from their homes, imprisoned and tortured, while children are torn from the Church."

The circular letter was entitled "Homage to the Holy Heart of Jesus." The pontiff ordered the Catholic churches to unite in prayer on the Friday following Corpus Domini when a special supplication directed by the pope should be said.

While the pope did not mention the countries by name it is believed that he referred to Mexico and Soviet Russia where restrictive religious laws have been enacted.

Be willing to let the future solve some of the problems you see and wait for one.

Absorbing as a new novel should be, this one failed to keep Ritzy Rosey awake. Train sounds lulled her to sleep. Not an inch have they gained on "72"

NEW performance values came into existence when the first Chrysler was created four years ago. . . . The industry since has gone over en masse to the effort to pattern after them. But the remarkable thing is that Chrysler "72" is just as much alone today as when it was the one and only exponent of its type. ¶ Alone in a theoretical sense only? Alone in performance which singles it out and sets it apart in competition of the street and road and hill as much as its brilliant beauty sets it apart in the eye of the onlooker. ¶ Chrysler "72" has not only not yielded a fraction of an inch of its leadership of four years ago—it has widened the gap and lengthened the distance.

quarters of the determined remnant of Morgan's men.

Their leaders were ...ured throughout the mountains—among them Boone Howard, John T. Williams, Green Wade, the Tollivers—and the unit was assigned the calvary battalion to maintain order and guard the eastern flank of General Boyle's department from surprise attack. The battalion did not escape scot-free, notwithstanding their arms were modern breech-loaders and six-shot revolvers, the first command to be thus fitted out.

Party Ambushed

A scouting party of 100 men was suddenly ambushed by a determined body of bushwackers, a relic of Morgan's command. As a result of this there was a loss of one killed, seven wounded and three captured, the latter unhurt. Three of the wounded men were also added to the prisoners. The scouting party was compelled to retreat.

Among the captured wounded was a young soldier boy from Morrow County, O., by the name of Adolph Sheibles. He was a member of Marion, O., Co. B, commanded by Captain Garrett. General Boyle was much disturbed by this event, feeling that there had been lax and careless movement of the scouts. Getting the particulars of this situation he had decided that any further scouting would be differently handled.

Three weeks after the event mentioned, there appeared at Captain Garrett's headquarters a lady who introduced herself as the mother of Adolph Sheibles. Mrs. Sheibles wished to know why no attempt had been made to rescue the wounded soldiers, and particularly her son, from the hands of the captors. Captain Garrett was very polite and advised Mrs. Sheibles to call upon Major Ijams, the battalion commander located at Flemingsburg, Ky.

Given Protection

Mrs. Sheibles' safety was looked after and she arrived in Flemingsburg, called upon Major Ijams at his headquarters and wanted to know why he had not sent into the mountains his troops to look after those wounded men.

The major said that he could not recommend the expedition suggested by Mrs. Sheibles, that it might cost the lives of scores of his troopers in the present situation, and referred her to General Boyle for a final decision in the matter. Two days later General Boyle, at his headquarters in Louisville, was notified by his aide that a lady from the North wished to see him on the matter of grave personal importance.

General Boyle said, "Well, I will see the lady; invite her in," and there appeared before him Mrs. Sheibles, a bright intelligent woman, pale from recent sorrow but outspoken and determined in her demand that troops be sent to the mountains for the rescue of her son.

General Boyle was kindly and courteous, but said he feared at present it could not be undertaken, repeating Major Ijams' statement that it might cost scores of lives at that time.

Mrs. Sheibles arose and with calmness and dignity said: "Very well, General, if your soldiers can not go to the rescue of my son, I will undertake it myself. I shall go up into the mountains, seeking out the guerilla leaders and ask them for my son and his wounded comrades."

Mrs. Sheibles left the generals office when suddenly he ordered his aide to ask her to return. She did so.

General Changes Mind

The general, taking down his maps and looking them over, said to a member of his staff: "We cannot permit Mrs. Sheibles to do this and I have come to the conclusion that it is about time to investigate conditions in the eastern mountains, so we'll assure Mrs. Sheibles that I will give immediate orders to Major Ijams to personally conduct a scouting party of not less than 200 of his cavalry with plenty of guides and everything else necessary, and attempt by a sudden dash the rescue of the wounded prisoners."

The major received his orders by telegram and immediately all was bustle and excitement among the cavalry, every member of the battalion being anxious to be detailed for the expedition. The detail from Co. B of Marion, was composed almost entirely of boys under the age of 17, and as each name was called there was an excited shout over his selection to enter upon this dangerous service. As the detail was made by letter the writer was among the first mentioned, and thereupon his chum, the late Edward L. True, managed to effect an exchange and was also made one of the party.

The expedition started at once, a very early movement in the morning. There were 200 cavalrymen, seven officers including Major Ijams, an ambulance drawn by four mules, and a strong body of mountaineers favorable to the Union cause as guides.

On the second day out at evening the command reached the home of a well-known and prominent man of the eastern hill country where Mrs. ... rabbi was known as the Widow ... The family ... very ...

Lieut. John K. Kade of the Marion company came out on the porch with a mountaineer's rifle in his hands. Lieutenant Kade was my friend always and looked after us boy soldiers at all times.

He said to me: "I am going to break this rifle, George, and to kill two birds with one stone. I will smash that rooster that is coming up to see what is going on, and you can have him for breakfast."

Bringing the rifle down with force the hammer struck the edge of the porch and instantly was discharged. Standing by Lieut. Kade I felt that he was hit and seeing that he was about to collapse, although he was a very heavy man, I quickly took hold of him, and calling for help we carried him into the house a very seriously wounded man.

Having with us a hospital steward, Major Ijams at once directed a detail of six troopers and the steward to start for camp at once with Lieut. Kade in the ambulance.

Creates New Problem

Major Ijams was perplexed; the only means he had of carrying back all his wounded soldiers, if he captured them, disappeared with the ambulance. He decided, however, to go on and in 12 hours we had reached and surrounded the cabin homes of two mountaineers where we found only the women folks at home, and our wounded boys being cared for by them.

Three of these were too seriously wounded to remove except by ambulance and we boys, greeting them and not thinking, gathered into the rooms they occupied and saw tears flowing, tears of joy as they welcomed us.

It was some time before the realization came to those of us who were comrades and pals, that we could not remove them, and this brought about a scene probably unequaled in the history of the Civil War.

There was but one thing to do and this was promptly arranged by Major Ijams. Calling the women into his presence he said to them: "I have come here for these boys and am unable to take them with me, having no means of transportation. I find that you have been taking care of them and that they are unharmed. I am about to recompense you for that service. Rations of coffee and some other things that we may be able to spare will be given you.

"In addition, I am going to hand you some good greenback money for your personal service. Now, I want to make an arrangement with you; that is to take care of these boys, see that they are well fed, and that nothing befalls them and that they are well treated by your men folks, and that as soon as they are able to send them to Phillipi where we will meet them. If you will do this, I will issue orders to the quartermaster to pay you in government money a liberal allowance for what you do for us. But I am going to say this: I will do all these things for you if these boys are safely delivered to us, which may be done under parole; but if they are harmed I want to say to you women that I will come back here with 2,000 men and when I get through with this country there will be nothing left. There will be no homes; there will be no buildings of any kind, and I rather think I will sow your little fields with salt."

Given Promise

Then the major smiled and said, "I rather think, though, I can depend upon you." He was assured by the wives and daughters of the mountaineers that the orders and instructions would be carried out to the letter, and with that we started on the return march rather downhearted but feeling our expedition would accomplish its purpose. Three weeks later it was the pleasure of the 5th Battalion of cavalry to witness the return of the wounded soldier boys and give into the hands of his mother, Adolph Sheibles, who although crippled for life was otherwise returned to his Ohio home in good health.

Young Sheibles became a distinguished physician and surgeon and his comrades of the scouting party met him some 50 years later at a National Reunion in Toledo.

And there the story of what one wartime mother of the Civil War had accomplished was retold.

The writer had the pleasure of meeting Dr. Sheibles personally.

SUPPER IS SUCCESS

Community Club Event Yields Profit of About $125

Approximately $125 was cleared from the cafeteria supper given by members of the Greenwood School Community Club last night at the school. An entertainment, which followed, consisted of a play by the eighth grade girls, a "rainbow fairies drill" by fifth grade girls, and a drill by Boys Scouts of the seventh grade. Joe Williams entertained with an xylophone solo, Ernest Owens with a selection on the Jew's harp, and Robert Lehner with ukelele numbers. Robert Glosser, violinist, and John Snow, trumpet, played several due selections.

Marion Man To Attend Event in Honor of Mother, 90 Years Old

Charles E. Lukens, 150 Franconia-av, will be in attendance at a family reunion Sunday, Mother's Day, in Clinton County. The occasion will celebrate the ninetieth anniversary of the birth of his mother, Mrs. Sarah H. Lukens, the sole remaining member of her pioneer family, descended from Thomas Macy.

The family history is traced back to 1650, when Mr. Macy migrated here and, on the first white man, settled on Nantucket Island, where he founded a refugee for exiles. Fifty-nine of his descendants, bearing the family name, served in the Union Army from the ...

tee and nephew of the Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, has sent word to party leaders in the capital that the Pennsylvania bloc will go to Kansas City unfettered by instructions and unbound by promises. They will not even be bound to cast a complimentary ballot for the secretary of the Treasury, according to word reaching here, although this expedient may be resorted to in order to hold the delegation intact in the early balloting.

Claim 47 New York Votes

To some extent the same is true in New York's 90 delegates, although here the Hoover managers claim 47 votes outright. The opposition contends that the Hoover claim of 47 votes is excessive, but irrespective of whether it is or not, many New York votes and a majority of the Pennsylvania delegation are necessary to nominate Hoover.

The next 30 days there will be considerable jockeying and conferring among the party leaders and the candidates' managers. It may even be that the nominee will be settled within that span of time through agreement or coalition. Present indications are, however, that such will not be the case, and that the Republicans will go into the convention with the issue still in doubt and New York and Pennsylvania sitting in the saddle.

compared with stocks of 517,000 tons one year ago. Though these figures indicate an increase, Ray explained that no increase of hay crops was apparent. He said that the numbers indicate the supply now on hand. Whether the increased supply is due to poor marketing prices or lack of production outlets, Ray refused to say.

Freezing Hurts Hay

Tame hay, (alfalfa, clover and timothy) meadows suffered considerable damage due to freezing weather during the past winter. Many fields of clover and alfalfa "heaved" badly. Unfavorable growing weather during most of the spring gave tame hay an average of 65 on May 1, as compared with 85 one year ago.

In concluding his report Ray summed up the condition of winter wheat, not only in Ohio but throughout the United States. The winter wheat forecast for the United States as of May 1 is 586,478,000 bushels, or 12 per cent less than the crop of 572,584,000 bushels produced in 1927.

Acreage planted in winter wheat in the United States last fall was over 47,000,000 acres, but the heavy abandonment reduced the acreage for harvest to 35,858,000.

CHURCH FILLED FOR ROBINSON SERMON

Noted Preacher Greeted by Large Congregation Here Last Night

First Church of Nazarene, S. State st, was crowded to capacity last night for the address by "Bud" Robinson, Pasadena, Cal., one of the outstanding preachers of the country. The church was completely filled at 7 o'clock, one-half hour before the time set for the service.

Reverend Robinson's address was on the subject, "Abundant Grace," based on Second Corinthians, 9:8. Rev. L. C. Meezer, Oklahoma City, who is accompanying him on a tour, conducted a song service and was heard in a vocal solo, "I Have An Understanding." William Dowler presided at the piano.

A number of visiting pastors were in attendance as well as O. E. Chalfant of Danville, Ill., representing Olivet College, at Olivet, Ill., who gave a talk, and C. A. Gibson, Columbus, superintendent of the Ohio District of the Nazarene Church. Mr. Chalfant is superintendent of the Illinois district.

Reverend Robinson and Mr. Meezer left this morning for Indianapolis, where they will conduct a service tonight.

A. B. WHITING ILL AT KANSAS HOME

Aged Man Well Known Here in Serious Condition After Accident

Word of the serious illness of her brother, A. B. Whiting, who is 92 years of age, at his home in Topeka, Kas., has been received by Mrs. A. P. Raffensperger, mother of Dr. C. H. Raffensperger, 208 S. Prospect.

The aged man, according to the word received here, is suffering from an attack of erysipelas which developed from an injury to his face which he received while doing some carpenter work at his home several days ago.

Mr. Whiting, who is well known here, was a pioneer settler of Kansas, migrating to that state with his two brothers in the early fifties. He has been active in the affairs of the city and at the present time is a trustee of Washburn College and president of the Mt. Hope Cemetery Association. An interesting feature in connection with the cemetery, the fund for which was built out and donated by Mr. Whiting, is that a large number of oak trees which adorn the grounds came from acorns gathered from an oak tree in Marion cemetery.

A number of years ago while on a visit to the city, Mr. Whiting, who was then laying out the cemetery at Topeka, greatly admired a large oak tree standing near the vault of Marion Cemetery and on his return home, requested of Dr. Raffensperger that he send him some acorns from the tree. Nearly a half bushel of the nuts were gathered by Dr. Raffensperger and forwarded to his uncle in Topeka.

The seeds were planted in the then barren spot by Mr. Whiting and with more than three-fourths of them growing into trees, the cemetery is thickly dotted with oak trees having their origin in the Marion cemetery.

2,800 PIGEONS ARE RELEASED FOR RACE

Birds, Property of Cleveland Club, Brought Here on Erie

Twenty-eight hundred homing pigeons belonging to various Homing Pigeon clubs at Cleveland are being released from a car on the Erie railroad at the rear of the Bindley Wholesale Grocery Co., today and Sunday in the weekly Homing pigeon races being conducted by the Cleveland Center Coursing Club.

The birds, which are in charge of Walter Lowrie, of Cleveland arrived this morning in a special car from Cleveland and at 12:30 today 1,000 of the birds were released. Arising into the air, the pigeons flew around in a circle several times and then headed directly north-east. The second lot will be released at 6:30 Sunday morning when 1,300 will be turned loose and the third lot of 600 birds will be released at seven o'clock.

The racing season, according to Mr. Lowrie, opened last week when 2,300 birds were released at Greenwich, Ohio. Next week the birds will be taken to Sidney for the third week in July.

To each bird's leg is attached a rubber band bearing a number, and as the birds arrive at the loft they are taken to Cleveland, the band is removed and placed in a time recording machine and a record made of the exact flying time.

The record time made by an bird, of 1,500 yards a minute, Mr. Lowrie said today. Because of the head wind, he said the birds in today's race would be handicapped but declared the opinion that the first birds would reach Cleveland not later than three o'clock this afternoon. In August Mr. Lowrie said he would return to this city with a car of birds for the young birds races.

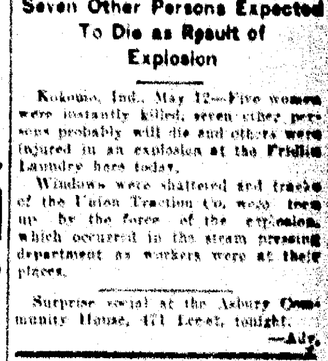
Too Wonderful To Be True? Former Policeman Fights On.

Sykodoner Attracts Bigger Crowds Than Ever.

"I would crawl for miles, if necessary, to impart the good news, to other unfortunate sufferers, says Mr. George Heh, former Marion policeman, and Erie R. R. police; but now of Carding-ton, Ohio.



He continued: "The agony I endured for a number of years, is something no human being is able to describe. It now all seems like a dream; for after three years of enforced illness—not being able to work, I feel like one born again. No less than twelve physicians and loads of medicine, failed to relieve my case. My heart beat so hard, that it could be heard in the next room; the least exertion would cause it to flutter, fearfully. When the pain would take me, my screams could be heard for a city block. Nothing seemed to give relief. I was discouraged beyond description. Now, after the very first treatment with the Sykodoner, I could shout for joy. In fact, I cannot tell you how rejoiced I am. I have worked every day, and as much as thirteen hours a day—on the farm, since the very first trial. It is almost too wonderful to be true. People call to see me, for miles and miles. Even while eating in restaurants, and other places, I hear people discussing my case, to my amusement, as they do not know me, until I surprise them with my identity. I consider it worth inestimable wealth to me, to ever have the satisfactory knowledge, that I have at last, found a true remedy. It is a real treat. Everyone in a position to do so, should avail themselves of it. It is now in Marion. Many other communities would be glad to have such an opportunity brought to their doors."

Daily Proverb—"Better a dry morsel, and quietness therewith, than a house full of sacrifices with strife."

Hereafter, curfew is to ring in Chicago at 1 a. m. After that hour there must be no interference with the bandits and the rum-runners in the use of the Windy City's streets.

Two Oregon fishermen dropped dead when they landed big fishes. That's one risk local Isaak Waltons never run. Hereabouts, if we are to credit their tales, the big fishes always get away.

Chicago is figuring on putting on a "bathing beauty contest." One might imagine that Chicagoans would appreciate the fact that their city has enough for which to answer as it is.

It's a rather sad commentary on the American political system when the leading candidates for mayor of the land's metropolis are two self-advertisers of the eminence of Mayor Jimmy Walker and former Mayor John F. Hylan.

"I wonder," said Secretary Hoover to the senate campaign funds committee, "if the gentlemen of the committee are not getting down to dealing in a pretty low type of street slander?" No occasion for wonder along that line, Herbert. In the light of recent senatorial investigations, that was to have been anticipated.

Speaking of her as "such a foolish girl," the father of Lilli Dillenz, the Viennese actress who is planning to fly from Germany to America, asks: "There are enough ships that go to America, so why use an aeroplane?" Huh! Coming over on a ship won't land a vaudeville contract!

India alone of all lands upon the face of the earth exceeded the United States last year in the number of smallpox cases. And the United States of all lands probably expends the most on its health services! It's hard to figure that we are getting value for what we expend in this connection.

A coroner's jury up in Chicago actually praised a policeman for killing a robber. Already we are seeing a beneficial result from the recent political upheaval in the Windy City. The decent citizenship is emerging from the fear of the criminal element which has been terrorizing it for years.

Consistent with his policy of keeping his feet firmly planted upon the ground, President Coolidge announces that he doesn't propose to go up into the air so long as he remains in public office.

"Maybe I am expecting too much," observed the restaurant philosopher at luncheon today, "but I still live in the hope of seeing the likeness of some 'bathing beauty' contestant or 'queen' of this or that who, in addition to a pretty pair of legs, has a face indicating the possession of a thimbleful of brains."

The presence of armed American rum-runners upon the Great lakes is being discussed in the Canadian house as a violation of the Rush-Bagot treaty. It would be more than a shame if the criminal element engaged in liquor traffic should disturb the friendship which has so long existed between this country and Canada.

Apparently Fake and a Cruel One.

A bottle which is said to have been picked up on the beach near Westerly, Rhode Island, was found to contain a message purporting to have been signed by Princess Lowenstein-Wirtheim of the plane, St. Raphael, which was lost in an attempt to make a non-stop flight from England to Canada the latter part of last year. The message, written with lead pencil, reads:

"Captains Hamilton and Minchin had a quarrel over the course, struck water and sinking fast. Can see light in distance think off Block island. Everything out of order now. Ship good for a few seconds yet.

"Princess Lowenstein."

The message, of course, may be genuine. Messages such as this have been known to travel across the Atlantic. This may have been written by the princess under the circumstances stated, and cast into the sea. But so many fake messages have been written and bottled and cast into the sea that it is not at all hard to believe that this message is simply another one. The very wording to the message indicates that it was faked. How would the princess be so familiar with lights as it implies, and why should Captain Hamilton and Colonel Minchin be quarreling over the course at a time when a light was in sight? The thing is incredible.

But there is one difference between this message and the general run of faked messages set afloat. It is one of the most cruel, if not the most cruel, that has ever come to our attention, for it casts a reflection upon two brave men whose records up to the time they hopped off in the St. Raphael stood without blemish.

In a Class by Itself.

The tenth anniversary of the inauguration of the United States air mail service will mark the coming week. May 15, 1918, with pilots and planes borrowed from the war department, the original service was established between New York and Washington, and thus it is that May 14 to 19, inclusive, of the present year is to be known as "Air Mail" week.

The initial service did not long survive. It was quickly discovered that the time gained by transporting the mail through the air was lost in its handling on the surface because of the distances between the landing fields and the postoffices. However, although speedily abandoned, this service was not without its lessons, chief of which was that, to be successful, the carrying of mail through the air must be over long distances. As a practical effort, the original service was a failure. Viewed in the light of an experiment, however, it was a decided success.

From this beginning in 1918 grew the great transcontinental system, which was first operated on a regular schedule, with flights both day and night, six years later; to be exact, July 1, 1924. The following year an extra over-night service between New York and Chicago was inaugurated. Soon thereafter contracts were let to private companies for the carrying of mail over lateral routes, connecting the important cities of the country with the main line, which was then turned over for operation to private companies, and soon a network of lines covered the country embracing sixty-three of the more important commercial cities of the land. Twenty-two routes are now in operation and five more are under contract and scheduled for operation within the present year, bringing the total mileage of the routes up to 12,550. Two additional routes with a mileage of 1,350 are being considered and Postmaster General Harry S. New announces that contracts for them will be let before the close of the year.

Air mail pilots are now flying an aggregate distance of 22,110 miles a day and carrying, on the average, 5,700 pounds of mail daily. When the new routes covering several thousand miles are added, this mileage will be materially increased, and it is very probable that by the end of the year the pilots of the service will be flying a total of 30,000 miles daily.

All things considered, the development of our mail service has been remarkable. Inaugurated but ten years ago by a service which proved both a transportation and an economic failure, the system today extends from Boston down along the Atlantic to Miami; along the gulf coast from Mobile to Brownsville; from Laredo northward and eastwardly to Chicago and then on to the Twin Cities; from Victoria, Seattle and Tacoma southward along the Pacific to Los Angeles, all of which points and the important points between them, like the larger population and commercial centers between the two oceans and the gulf and the Great lakes, being connected up with the great transcontinental line. In ten years the experiment inaugurated May 15, 1918, has developed into a system which is a marvel in the eyes of the postal authorities of all lands; an air mail service without an equal the whole world over; an air mail service in a class by itself.

Apropos of the handing of his hat to former Crown Prince Carol, of Roumania, by the British government, it becomes manifest that John Bull doesn't propose to entertain a plotter against a friendly government, even though the plotter be a second cousin of King George. It's just possible that that relationship makes John all the more anxious to get rid of his unwelcome visitor.

After Fourteen Years.

Fourteen years ago two young Norwegians—a young man and a girl—ran away from home and sailed for this country, where they planned to be married. Reaching New York, the young man failed to meet the immigration tests and was sent back to Norway.

The girl, thus left alone in New York, was taken in charge by a Salvation army worker, who sent her to a Salvation army home, where a few months later a daughter was born to her. The assistant superintendent of the home, Commandant Emily Laird, found a home for the girl and her child on Long Island, where the two have since resided.

The child's father, a Norwegian school teacher, promised to return to this country as soon as possible, but one obstacle after another prevented him. Disappointment after disappointment followed, but the girl never lost faith in her lover. She insisted that he would come back to her. Acquaintances made by her had their doubts, but she—never.

Last week the girl, now a young woman in her middle twenties, called on Commandant Laird in New York to announce that, after fourteen years, her lover was on his way to America with the proper papers for his admission and that they were to be married upon his arrival.

A story of love and constancy such as this has appeal to us. It is good to know that there are lovers such as these in this day and age of "companionate marriage."

If Count Karolyi, discredited former president of Hungary, succeeds in entering this country, as planned, through the "powerful influences" at work to smuggle him in, it shouldn't be much of a job to arrest him and ship him out. He may be apprehended easily by watching the reds, the pinks, the yellows, the disloyalists and the social climbers who are always glad to tag "nobility" no matter what the cost.

Metheson reports having seen a ball of fire plunge out of the heavens and bury itself in the "sparsely-settled district about twenty miles away," and hasn't yet decided whether it was a fireball, a meteor or a burning aeroplane. Metheson will be remembered as the place in which the whirring of the propeller of an aeroplane has been heard every time a plane flying either eastward or westward across the Atlantic has been overdue. In a word, it's the geographical Doc Cook of Canada.

Knowledge a Health Factor.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

A breakdown in the nourishment of the body is the most serious affliction that can come to any person, man or woman, grown-up or child. It is bad enough in itself, but, what is far worse, it means the destruction of the first line of the defense.

You are not likely to have tuberculosis, Bright's disease, heart disease, a dangerous form of anemia, or any chronic illness, if the nutrition is good. But when it falls below normal, danger is ahead.

Even though the quality and quantity of the food are among the factors having most to do with nutrition, it is not among the poor, with little money to lay food, that we get our examples of undernourishment. The rich and the educated are just as likely to be victims.

Chesterton spoke of the "ignorance of the educated." In knowledge of foods there is poverty among the rich. A man may know everything except how to live. He may be rich in houses and lands, but poor in knowing what to eat and what not to eat.

In the selection of foods, it is necessary not only to have enough to eat, but also to have foods that supply the essential elements for growth, repair and proper nourishment. In this matter, quality is even more important than quantity.

What are the required elements for proper nourishment?

There must be a sufficient supply of protein food of high quality. Most of this comes from animal sources, but not all of it by any means. The vegetables and cereals contribute a high percentage. Of course milk does, too, but I am including it in the animal foods.

There can not be a properly nourished body without fat, the mineral salts and the important vitamins. Really, it should not be difficult to choose the absolutely necessary foods, but in thousands of homes they are not provided. Coffees, bread and sweets, good as they are in the right place, can never be complete substitutes for milk, cereals, fresh fruit and green vegetables.

There are certain food habits that make for undernourishment. The first of these is irregularity in eating. Another is eating between meals, particularly of things that do the body no good, but which interfere with the enjoyment of the real foods served at the regular meals. Eating too fast, without chewing the food thoroughly, is another and a common fault.

Worry, overwork, loss of sleep, hours in poorly ventilated rooms—all these are factors in breaking down resistance and producing undernourishment. Overactivity of body and mind has its effects upon the general welfare.

Neglect of the skin, failure of kidney and bowel elimination, avoidance of water drinking, and overlooking anything having to do with personal hygiene are other matters which bear upon the nourishment of the body. Neglect of the teeth, tonsils and other physical defects is a mistake. You can not afford to disregard these matters.

I wish I could impress upon you the necessity for keeping your body nourished, firm, elastic, and fit in every way. When you order your life in such a way as to avoid undernourishment, you will be raising your resistance to disease and promoting your chance for a long life.

THE CABLES TO SOUTH AMERICA.

A celebration was held in New York this week to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of cable service between the United States and Latin America. In 1878, eleven years before the first Pan-American conference met in Washington, the Mexican Telegraph company was formed; in 1882, it began to operate 1,578 miles of cable and land lines. So little business was available that the toll rate to Panama was seven dollars per word.

Eight years ago the company merged with the Central and South American Telegraph company, and it now operates 26,402 miles of cable and land lines, and the cable rate on commercial messages has been reduced to ten cents a word.

In a very real sense, the growth of Pan-Americanism during the last decades has been due to the energy and vision of the pioneers who fifty years ago laid the first cable linking the two continents. Many other factors, among them direct steamship services to Latin-American ports, were to combine with the cable lines in bringing the peoples of this hemisphere into closer commercial intimacy as the years passed. But the telegraph cable was the first to break the ice of an earlier isolation, paving the way for a trade relationship which otherwise must have been greatly delayed or been altogether impossible.

The future of that relationship, with its benefits and advantages to all of the Americas, continues to depend on the extent to which the facilities for free and easy inter-communication are multiplied. The two continents are still unconnected by rail, much less by motor or air highways. With the Latin-American cable anniversary reminding us of the importance of close contact as a means of promoting the Pan-American spirit, it is not difficult to visualize the tremendous possibilities of a yet closer inter-American collaboration through development of such modern methods of communication as the motor car and the airplane.—Detroit Free Press.

HANDING CAROL HIS HAT.

Great Britain's ouster of Carol of Roumania marks a departure from the policy to which the world is accustomed. It is not without precedent that the British government bids the former crown prince begone; that is the wise perogative of government in dealing with intrigues within its boundaries against a friendly nation. But the world is accustomed to regarding Great Britain as extremely tolerant toward political refugees, and so this ouster attracts attention.

Nevertheless, expulsion of this always potential and now apparently active trouble-maker is a reasonable act of government. The situation in Roumania may partake of oppression of the peasants by the ruling powers—which means the Bratianu party rather than the royal house itself. But for Great Britain constructively to contribute to revolt by giving habitat to Carol while he plays upon that revolt solely for his own advantage, is quite out of the question. If the peasants who have been massing so astoundingly in protest against the Bratianus shall seek and obtain reforms "on their own," that is a purely domestic affair, in which Great Britain or any other European government can have only such interest as is entailed by concern for European peace. But to give aid and comfort, even inferentially, to this discredited offshoot from the reigning Roumanian house is something that even so liberal a government as Great Britain can not afford, if only for the sake of stable government throughout Europe.—Minneapolis Journal.

Dinner Stories.

Griggs—"Do me a favor, old man. Don't let your wife wear her new spring costume when you come round to our place. I don't want my wife to see it just now."

Briggs—"Why, man alive, that's just why we are coming!"

"Yep, I had a beard like yours once, and when I realized how it made me look, I cut it off."

"Well, had a face like yours once, and when I realized that I couldn't cut it off, I grew this beard."

"Why don't you give us some old-fashioned oratory?"

"I'll guarantee to produce old-fashioned oratory," replied Senator Sorghum, "if you can show me an old-fashioned audience."

A young bridegroom, after the wedding was over and the bride's father had gone off to the club, began to search anxiously among the wedding gifts.

"What are you looking for, dear?" said the bride.

"That $250 check of your father's," he said. "I don't see it anywhere."

"Poor papa is so absent-minded," said the bride. "He lit his cigar with it."

Normal Conditions Forecasted.

Up in Minneapolis the other day the fans showered cushions on the umpire, which is comforting evidence that the summer promises to be somewhere near normal after all.—Nashville Banner.

Friar Bacon.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

There is much talk again of Roger Bacon and his ciphers.

The late Professor Newbold, of Pennsylvania university, discovered a key to the ciphers of the "Wonderful Doctor"—Doctor Mirabilis—which has been hidden for more than six centuries on the last page of an old manuscript found in 1912 in an ancient Italian castle. But Professor Newbold died before he had time to translate more than a very little of the manuscript, which is supposed to have been written by the old friar while in prison during fourteen years for offending the church.

But Roger Bacon's offenses to the church are of little interest, compared with the question of what he knew about the laws of nature. The manuscript is believed to contain things that he did not dare to put into plain language.

What a strange ostrich superstition has made of man, keeping his head buried in the sands of ignorance lest he should see the light of knowledge! The monkish orders were too cunning simply to spike the enemy's guns; instead they turned them and fired them against their inventors. Thus, as Roger Bacon's fame at Oxford spread on account of his discoveries in natural law, they accused him of working miracles, only they called them "black" miracles.

The reputation of practitioner of "black arts" which they thus fixed upon him has, in a way, lasted more than 600 years. It has served a good turn to modern romance writers. Thus, Bulwer Lytton's famous short story, "The House and the Brain," one of the most thrilling ghost stories ever written, is based on "Friar Bacon's" alleged necromantic powers.

It is curious that more than 300 years after his death another Bacon—Francis Bacon—not descended from Roger—gained undying fame for views of science and nature that seem, in a way, a revival and expansion of what the first one taught. Each insisted upon the domination of experiment in scientific investigation. Roger Bacon illustrated his doctrines with, among other things, an investigation of the nature and cause of the rainbow, which he very clearly demonstrated. This would naturally have been an offense to the theologians of his day, who insisted on the sacredness of the story that God set "His bow" in the sky as a promise to Noah that there should be no second deluge.

The latest scientific speculation assures us that matter is only energy under lock and key in the prison of the atom. Friar Bacon said that all natural phenomena are produced by the interaction of virtues—forces of energy—and matter, "the result being the thing known." After all, considering the disadvantages of his time and environment, the old friar does not appear so far behind the modern mathematical physicist, who, having discovered the electrons, now seems in danger of losing them.

In Bacon's day the public, if it did any thinking, thought in terms of theology. It did not try to understand him, but set him down for an unorthodox sorcerer. In our day people try to think in terms of science, but they take too literally what comes from the front, not understanding how far idealism enters into modern scientific speculation. But listen to Professor R. B. Lindsay:

"We build a hypothesis which seems to satisfy our longings for logical completeness, and then act toward our hypothesis as if it were reality, because it works. Yet we must never forget that this reality is of necessity only a transient one. New facts render old hypotheses untenable, the old reality yields to new reality, and so science progresses."—Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, May 12.—After 1 a. m. mid-town Manhattan streets are dotted with the shuffling figures. They are harmless and hide from the daylight. The police are familiar with most of them and they are rarely bothered. They are merely drab threads in the vivid pattern of a metropolitan night.

Some are queer creatures with twisted bodies and cracked brains who scavenge gutters and poke about refuse cans, seemingly in hunt of hidden treasures. They mumble and shrink from human contact.

Then there are those pasty-faced men with several days' growth, collars turned up and hats pulled down. They are the gray army of drug addicts who go to all-night restaurants for frequent cups of coffee and to pick up their day's supply from the peddlers.

There is a class of beggars, too, who prowl between midnight and dawn in search of roaming drunks who are easily moved to benevolence by a hardluck tale. Still others have a venomous quiet in their voices which is effective with the sober wayfarer in a dark street.

Columbus circle and Herald square are pivotal points for night birds who vanish with dawn. They clot in little groups like so many dumb sheep. Rarely do they seem to talk, but it is obvious some intangible communication passes among them.

In the west Forties when weather is seasonable there are many doorway sleepers. These are mostly ragged urchins who jump up before daylight, shake themselves and rush off for their supply of morning papers. They are hardy youngsters whose wits are sharpened on the city's pavements.

Fifth avenue has a well-dressed, silver-haired woman who strolls leisurely from the Plaza fountain to Forty-Second street several times in the early morning hours and vanishes up a side street. Private patrolmen have seen her for years. Railroad terminals, too, attract those who move so furtively about in the night.

The most expensive engagement ring of the season is the product of a Fifth avenue jeweler. It is a platinum design flecked with small diamonds and rubies. The prongs hold a huge solitaire diamond. In the flat surface of the diamond, there is imprisoned a marvelous miniature of the groom-to-be. The price is said to be more than $50,000, and in inserting the miniature a valuable diamond was ruined for practical purposes.

* * *

The hatless fad seems in evidence only at night this summer among men, and then with those in dinner clothes riding in automobiles. The vogue had much popularity until those who always seek eccentricity in every possible manner adopted it. The nuts K. O. a lot of dandy ideas.

The Bar building on west Forty-Fourth street is occupied chiefly by lawyers and was designed for their occupancy. There are a dozen or more buildings given over solely to dentists and doctors, and one large building on Forty-Second street has several floors tenanted chiefly by Christian Science practitioners. The Putnam building, where the Paramount theater, clock and all, now stand, was once occupied solely by theatrical producers and agents. The latest in building segregation is a structure planned for Fifty-Sixth street which will house only manicure and hair-dressing parlors.

Incidentally, it is said scandal snoopers for gossip weeklies pick up their choicest bits in manicure and hair-dressing salons. Just like the barber shop back home.

It used to be a trick of unscrupulous gossip journals to run off a proof of a scurrilous article and present it to an intended victim for him to make corrections, thereby making his past life flash before him and inspiring a hush advertisement. It worked for years, and reaped a fortune to scoundrels. But not any more. The public has learned a tip-off to the police is effective.—Copyright, 1928, by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

The ten-book ideas are still coming in. Some time ago the writer asked for suggestions as to the best ten books to take to a desert isle—if you were limited to ten. Now comes a list from a studious and thoughtful man which differs much from most of the lists. He says:

"Webster's New International Dictionary," Palgrave's "Golden Treasury," O. Henry's short stories, Scientific American "Handybook of Useful Formulae," Dull's "Mathematics for Engineers," six-place mathematical tables, Shakespeare, the Holy Bible, the Alcoran of Mohammed and the Tables of Confucius.

Comfort is a dangerous word and a dangerous thing. The love of comfort has brought a softness which is one of the unfortunate attributes of so-called civilized living. It is known that at the time of the settlement of this country the American Indian was a wonderfully healthy and robust type. Alcoholism and the introduction of European customs—and diseases—killed off the Indians in great numbers.

Civilization will always have its victims as well as its beneficiaries.

Despite the enormous amount of publicity which aeroplanes are given in this country the average person knows little about flying. Comparatively few people have ever been in a plane, and few know what the probabilities of danger or safety are. A Detroit concern, Stout Air Services Incorporated, furnishes passengers which do a little at least in educating the casual rider of the air to the significance of this mode of travel. One learns that:

"The air is like the ocean. It supports the plane just as firmly as the ocean supports a ship. At the speed you are traveling in the air has a density practically equivalent to water; to satisfy yourself put your hand out of the window and feel the tremendous pressure. That ever-present pressure is your guaranty of absolute safety.

"The wind is similar to an ocean current. At flying levels it is usually as regular as a great, smooth-flowing river. Once in a while the wind is gusty and rough, like the gulf stream off the coast of Florida. These gusts used to be called 'air pockets,' but they are nothing more than billows of war and cool air and are nothing to be alarmed over.

"The air pressure changes with the altitude. Some people have ears that are sensitive to the slight change in air density at different altitudes. If so, swallow once in a while or breathe a little through the mouth so that the pressure on both sides of the ear drums will be equalized.

"Dizziness is unknown in aeroplanes. There is no discomfort in looking downward while flying, because there is no connection with the earth; only a sense of confidence and security."

HOPE FOR FINAL TAX VOTE TODAY

Lack of Interest Nearly Assumes Proportions of Filibuster

Washington, May 12—In the face of a lack of interest that has nearly assumed filibuster proportions, administration leaders today were hoping against hope for a final vote in the Senate before nightfall on the $200,000,000 tax reduction bill.

With enactment of the administration's bill assured through a Republican-Insurgent coalition, senators on both sides of the chamber blocked action on the bill day after day by debating political subjects and making long speeches on topic other than taxation. The extraneous speeches, consuming hours of time, have prevented consideration of the corporation and the surtax rates on four successive days.

Final action on the corporation and surtax rates will be followed by passage of the bill, as all other undetermined rates are of minor importance or are not subject to partisan controversy. Although the Democrats have proposed heavier reductions of both these taxes, the coalition insured enactment of the administration's recommendations.

It cost some people more to keep up appearances than it does to live.

THE TOWN CLOCK

WITH all the refurbishing of the city now in process and that which is in the making our village is going to stand out in the tourist mind like a derby hat at a circus. Of course every one is pleased pink about it and not only that, they are anxious to do their bit in a helpful way. Here's something that has been overlooked, or perhaps it is being withheld as a last minute surprise. If the latter is true, whoever is in charge of the matter better come clean for tongues are wagging. I have it first hand, for I stood on the corner for at least a quarter of an hour and supposed and argued as to whether or not they would or wouldn't and why they should or shouldn't. Here's the dope. The town clock is being talked about. There are those who say that a little interior decorating would help a lot and urge that it get fit up a little oftener and better. Another opined that time meant nothing to the controlling interests in the cupola and hinted at lack of cooperation between the time faction and the striking board. The dirtiest dig of all, I thought was the blatant statement that the clock not only was two-faced about things but was four-faced and that there were times when they positively did not agree.

TRIMMINGS

Here's something to ponder on, red hot from the furniture marts. Suites with a Harewood with Bubinga borders and tops, inlaid marquestry on a background, mirrors of horseshoe shape and silver trimmings; a pedestal diningroom suite with silver trimmings; a bedroom suite in natural maple with bandings in silver and silver and green stencils; built in vanity lights; a bedroom suite in lacewood framed with square silver handles and two small lights in the headboards for reading purposes.

Changing Times—Changing Costs

A few years ago you bought a dozen oranges and paid only about twenty cents for them. Today four oranges cost you the same amount.

You think nothing of the difference in price, although the product is identical. You recognize that changing times bring changing costs.

Gas is no different than other commodities—yet gas remains the same price.

Today it costs much more to bring gas to Marion than it did when oranges sold for twenty cents a dozen.

But gas is also worth more to Marion today—for only with an unfailing gas supply can the city attract new industries and hold what is here.

Marion is asked to face not a fancy but a fact, recognizing for the city's industrial welfare that "I don't think money had anything ... it. Until Bob Mason should ... sell you Honey Valley, to ... to impound the debris when he ... started sluicing down that hill ... the girl felt she had to stick ... to decline to desert a friend, particularly when that friend was, as she believed, wrongfully imprisoned.

"Of course," he added, "she's a mountain girl and born with an undue capacity for cherishing resentment. I gathered from Uncle Charley that the real reason she wouldn't sell was because she feared, if she did, the company would proceed to impound its debris in Honey Valley without bothering to acquire title to it from Mason."

Jethroe chuckled comfortably. "Not so far off the target at that," he admitted. "Once we succeeded in partially spoiling Honey Valley, we'd have the debris commission after us, of course. When Mason heard what we were doing he would have his attorney complain to the commission, and we'd be stopped. But Honey Valley would have been ruined, and all Mason could do then would be to sue us for damages—a pretty difficult battle for a man in state's prison. He'd surrender and sell us Honey Valley at a fair price, rather than fight us. He couldn't afford the expense of litigation!

"Remember also the man has an infant son and he must provide for the child's future. That consideration alone would break down Mason's resolution not to sell in order to defeat my plans. Men do some pretty straight thinking in the solitude and loneliness of prison cells." Jethroe winked comically. "Evidently he was well pleased with his strategy. He pushed a box of cigars across his desk toward Thurlow.

"Would you have done that to Mason?" Thurlow queried.

"Certainly. Why not? The Hercules Company has too much money invested in equipment to consider pulling out of that country merely because the lands we at present own or lease will shortly be cleaned up. Mason can get more money for his property from us than from anybody else, and if he will not listen to reason—well, I think we're justified in using a little pressure."

"You used some before, did you not? At his trial?"

"He had murdered your predecessor in cold blood, and I made the issue a personal one. Should anyone murder you, John, I would exert every effort to convict the murderer."

Thurlow shrugged. "Of course, Mr. Jethroe, it all happened before I entered your employ, but frankly I have yet to meet anybody in that country who doesn't sympathize with Mason who doesn't believe my predecessor got the job got exactly what was coming to him."

"A difference of opinion is responsible for horse trades," Jethroe quoted. "How did you happen to discover the girl didn't own the land, after all?"

"Well, when you despaired of purchasing that land yourself, self-interest indicated that I should get on the job. The Hercules Hydraulic Mining Company pays me $25,000 a year, and I disliked very much the thought of losing that position when the company should discontinue operations, due to its failure to secure more desirable ground on which to operate. You will recall that the Dogwood Flats postoffice is in the general store of the Hercules Company, and that our assistant store manager is the postmaster.

"Recently this assistant was ill for a few days so I acted as postmaster, and in that capacity I observed that Uncle Charley Canfield had secured a postal money-order in favor of the county tax collector for the sum of $6.40. Inasmuch as land in the vicinity is assessed at 10 cents per acre I jumped to the conclusion that Uncle Charley must own 640 acres or one section.

"I had a curiosity to ascertain its location because it occurred to me that, if the old man paid taxes on a section of land he was not using, it was because he believed it to be mineralized, for land without gold in it was just rocks and dirt to Uncle Charley.

"So I drove over to the county-seat and looked up Uncle Charley's holdings on the assessment books. When I checked the description—section, township and range—with the map, I saw he owned the hill section you hoped to buy from Monica Dale, because you thought she had inherited it from her father. I discovered that Ashforth Dale never had owned the property, so I concluded that the story that Uncle Charley had sold the land to him was a smoke screen put out by Uncle Charley for some secret reason. He was a curious old chap and nobody ever knew why he did anything. He loved to appear rough and tough and mysterious."

"Very interesting—very," Henry Jethroe murmured, and drummed on his desk with his pudgy fingers. "As soon as this information came into your possession you wrote me that you thought you could close a deal for that hill section for half a million dollars, but—you didn't tell me old Canfield owned the property."

"No, I didn't."

"You induced the Hercules Company to deposit half a million dollars in escrow in the Siskiyou County Bank for 30 days, against the deed, in fee simple, which you hoped to obtain for the land."

"Yes, I wrote the company to that effect, urging that action."

"But why half a million? You knew you could get it for a quarter of that sum from old Uncle Charley. In fact, the old fool would probably have dropped dead if you had offered him ten thousand."

"Well," Thurlow replied frankly, "the property, in my opinion, would have been dirt cheap at half a million, and you had told me once that the company would willingly pay a million for it, if it had to."

"Nevertheless it was up to you, as an employee of the company, to buy it as cheaply as possible for us, John."

"I agree with you, sir. As you know should be buy?"

"Absolutely. Well?"

"When you wired me to secure a deed in the name of James P. Ingalsbee rather than the Hercules Hydraulic Mining Company, Mr. Jethroe I was mildly curious. I discovered that Mr. Ingalsbee was your attorney and the attorney for the company. Further investigation developed the fact that the company's money had not been placed in escrow against the deed, so I concluded that half million dollars was your money. The Board of Directors of the Hercules Hydraulic Mining Company knew nothing about the deal. Although a dummy, I am one of the directors."

"But you knew all about it, John."

"The other directors did not."

"Well, is that any of your business?"

"Not particularly. However, under the circumstances, I concluded that my duties in the matter could no longer be regarded as official. Personal rather. Yours were personal, you know."

"As president of the company I was acting in the interests of the company."

"But you weren't taking the company into your confidence."

"Granted. As you intimated a little while ago, I am the company."

"You own 51 percent of it. But you're not the company."

Jethroe's fist smote his desk sharply. "What I say goes," he reminded Thurlow. "How much did you offer old Canfield for that property?"

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

SATURDAY. The best day in the week except in vacations. I made the bunch clean the barn for me after breakfast or I wouldn't tell them about the fight between the barber and my father.

After that we went around to hooraw the barber but the barber shop was closed. My father must of painted the barber pretty hard to make him shut up his shop on Saturday, for that is when everyone gets scraped and perfumed for Sunday. But the broken mug was on the floor and the bootblacks chair was ripped over and we could see the towel the barber had wiped his bloody nose on. Younies said she was sorry it happened. I told her I wasn't. She said she was sorry because it kept us from coming to her house. But I told her I would rather see a good fight any time than go to a girl's house. I said the next time they fit I was going to set up in the barber chair and take it all in. It is hard to see a fight good when it is in a small room and you are under foot and might be stepped on or stop a punch.

From there we wet over to the Vacant lot to have a game of ball, and Miss Parmer came out to watch us for a while and tell us to be careful. She said if she had her way she would make all boys play with rubber bats so they couldn't hurt each other. I told her she was crazy if she thought rubber bats wouldn't hurt. I told her about the time the circus came and we had all crawled under the edge of the tent but me and I was bent over with my hand under and my pants stretched tighter than my skin when a circus man came around the tent with a piece of garden hose and jammed me where my pants were tight so hard that I jumped almost into the middle of the ring, and let out a yell that almost stopped the circus. I told Miss Parmer if she had got that she would know a rubber bat could hurt, and she said, "Don't mention it. It hurts me to think of it!" And then she laughed and went in the house. There wasn't anything to laugh at. I never do laugh when I think of it. She ought to of seen the welt. He also ought'n't, but I completely got even.

A Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

AT the hoot of the owl Princess Olina sprang to her feet with a little terrified exclamation. I moved close to her and put my hand reassuringly upon her arm. Lillian spoke in matter of fact tones.

"I supposed that is the signal of the red-bearded man," she said as coolly as if she were speaking of a vegetable peddler's cry. "Do you recognize it?"

"Oh, yes," Olina said patently compelling herself to calmness.

"Then you'll have to go out to see him," Lillian went on. "Remember, he's a friend, and he apparently is near the house. He said he would come without the other man, so some one of us can go out with you."

"That will be my job," Dicky said firmly. "I know the man, remember, knew him overseas, so there won't have to be any explanations if I go. Come along, Miss Lincoln, I'll see that you are not frightened."

He picked up a scarf and put it around the girl's shoulders, and in another minute they were outside the door and walking in the direction of the owl's hoot. But I was not looking at them. My eyes had been attracted to a curious expression on Lillian's face as she listened to Dicky's proposal that he should be the one to escort Miss Lincoln. It was as if his action had been something she expected, something which confirmed some theory of hers. And I distinctly saw her fingers clench into her palms.

It was less than five minutes before Dicky and Princess Olina came back. The girl was deadly pale, and Dicky himself was not quite calm as he delivered the message which the red-bearded man had given.

"He can't hold his friend Sergius off any longer than tomorrow night," he says. "At nine o'clock he expects to give the owl signal again, and then Miss Lincoln is to come out with the message she has for him. He's already told you about the plan Sergius has to kidnap her and hold her for ransom. The plot is well laid. Sergius has a swift, small truck in readiness upon a wood road not far from here, and suitably loaded with vegetables for the market, but in which a hiding place has been made for the girl. In that way he's planned to get her off the island through New York and up into the hill section of Jersey before morning. Then he's planned to transfer her again and rush her to a hiding place in the mountains where he's had in readiness for some time.

"He's too bad to spoil such wonderful plans," Lillian mocked with a curious look at Princess Olina's white face. "Perhaps we can help a little, if you will tell us how. Come, my dear, we've got to put the plan out of [illegible] when you need them," she promised. "But, of course, we do need that thing completed."

"You shall have it," I said, and after a night of such steady torturing application as I hope never to put in again, I completed my translation. Nothing remained but the copying, and I aroused Lillian from the sleep upon my couch which she had taken sensibly between her trips to the kitchen to prepare the fresh coffee upon which I had worked.

"Look!" I said, and as she read over what I had written she caught at the table.

"It's the thing we needed," she said. "It will take Allen's chemical knowledge to translate the formula, but we know it's that of a new and powerful explosive, worse than anything so far attempted because enough of it can be made by one man from cheap simple materials to destroy a city. And these names—you have two lists—oh, I see, one a list marked for murder, the other with the names of some of this precious gang's representatives at high court."

She scanned them hastily, exchanged a glance of horror with me as the name of a high executive of our own country met her eyes upon the list of those marked for destruction, and as opposite it upon the list of conspirators she saw a name almost as well-known and belonging to the highest government circle.

"You've done something for your country this day, my girl," she said, and then bent over the paper again.

"A date after the name of each ruler," she said. "That must be the time set for their departure from this world. And Olina's own mother and father upon the list with a date only two months away! I suppose the Transvaalian came upon the other plan in Olina's presence [illegible] gave her the message. I must [illegible] borrow their car. DUKE'S GOLD TEETH

SOME dogs in the city may ride in large motor cars, others may be fed from china dishes, but few have more expensive tastes that Duke, a German police dog, owned by Dr. R. W. Andrews, local dentist.

Duke may not eat from silver plates but he does crunch his food with two silver gauntlet tenacatik D onano gold crowned teeth. Several days ago Dr. Andrews noticed that Duke's teeth were causing him pain. An investigation revealed that cuspids, better known in canine parlance as fangs, were worn down until the nerves were nearly exposed.

A little work in the laboratory of the dentist's office and Duke had two neat crowns placed over the ailing teeth.

OLD GLORY

DO Marion residents give the proper amount of attention to displaying the American flag? There are times when circumstances indicate more or less negligence on that point. In the last year, it has been pointed out, there have been certain days when Old Glory was supposed to be generally disturbed, but with only a scattering display of the colors here.

When Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, eminent theologian and philosopher, gave an address here last week, he reached a point in his lecture where an eloquent reference was made to the flag. This was to be expected, as Dr. Cadman's subject was "The Mission of American Democracy."

Apparently, the speaker intended to add to the effectiveness of his words by pointing to the flag But there was none to point at. As he reached the climax of his oratorical phrasing, Dr. Cadman glanced about him, obviously looking for the national emblem. Sighting nothing but bare walls, he proceeded with his discourse.

The incident seemed to provide convincing evidence that it would be entirely appropriate to have Old Glory always on display in every public meeting place.

BATTLING BIRDS

A SLEEK proud robin on conquest bent in a Marion residence district one day last week sauntered up to a basement window lustily engaged in extracting his unwilling breakfast from a sudden ground. Looking up, while the same breakfast conquered, rolled pleasurably down his throat, he beheld not more than several inches away from him another robin, equally sleek, and said to tell, equally proud.

He did not like the other robin. He gazed long, cocking his little head in wonderment and was driven to anger when his neighbor, at the self same moment, began a similar close scrutiny of his own faultless self.

Enraged, he flew at his scrutinizer at exactly the same time that the latter, also enraged, delved after him. The attack was repulsed, however, not by his aggravating neighbor but by what seemed to be a very, very "blank" wall. He waited, pondering this opponent likewise) and made another attack, a third and a fourth.

Finally, exasperated beyond endurance he decided to use strategy on this queer fellow-creature so ably protected by something unseen. Pretending indifference, he turned and walked slowly away (his sly little pugilist aggravatingly mimicking him the while), turned suddenly, and made another attack only again to meet defeat—the same utterly unexplainable, ignominious defeat.

The attacks continued, with every device of pugilism employed, until a woman washing dishes at a nearby kitchen window, greatly amused at the whole proceeding, decided to save Mr. Robin from further disgrace and his growing fatigue by placing a newspaper over the window opening.

This once-upon-a-time story (though really it's true) would end here, had not the owner of the window removed the paper, Mr. Robin returned to again meet and attack to no avail that other cocky robin.

The woman saved the day however (women will) by informing the window-owner of the bird's sad state and the newspaper was again put to use, for several days, until Mr. Robin had completely forgotten his erstwhile opponent in other more interesting pastime—his search for an attractive spring bride, perhaps.

TRAFFIC CHANGES

TWO passenger trains are to be taken from the schedule of the local Pennsylvania railway line Sunday, leaving only two in the daily passenger service. Another development resulting from the rapid and marvelous increase in motor transportation.

There was a time when this branch of the Pennsylvania, originally known as the Short Line, handled one of the largest volumes of passenger traffic in Ohio. Particularly was this true in the summer season, when thousands of persons used the road in making trips to Cedar Point and other lake resorts.

Travelers to the lake still are numerous, probably more so than in those earlier years, but few of them are going by rail.

When the Short Line was operated during its first years, it was used extensively by residents of small towns near Marion coming here to trade and transact other business. The ticket sale at Waldo, for instance, ran into figures of considerable proportions.

Building of the Short Line came as almost an epochal event for people in these villages. Prior to that time their only means of conveyance to Marion was by horse-drawn vehicles over roads that were none too good.

Now they ride into Marion in comfortable motor cars over hard-surfaced highways that are as smooth as the finest city streets.

They no longer need the Short Line for passenger service, excepting on rare occasions. Its value for freight transportation, however, is greater than ever and is certain to increase.

Even our best friends are likely to appear bad in amateur theatricals.
